Another Colma Battle Over Police Reserve

The subject of a police reserve force for Colma has sparked another controversy on the city council with Mayor Rena Vallerga urging the matter be scrapped permanently.

For several months the issue of whether to add a police reserve force to the city's current one-man department comprised of Chief Raymond Ottoboni has been bandied about by the council. But each time the reserves are discussed opponents have successfully had the matter shelved.

Last week when the council got around to discussion of the reserves it was proposed that City Councilman and Police Commissioner Fred Garbini hold fact-finding talks with Chief Ottoboni and Broadmoor Police Chief Raymond Savage.

Broadmoor police now provide protection to Colma under terms of an agreement with that city.

A petition signed by some 26 Colma businessmen was turned over to the council by Ottoboni, son of Councilman Raymond Ottoboni. Reportedly the petitioners feel the Colma police force should be beefed up, to provide better protection.

During subsequent discussion on the reserves it was charged by Mayor Vallerga the procedure followed by the chief in asking council sanction for the reserve force — the petition — was "handled all wrong."

The petition was called "completely useless" by Mrs. Vallerga.

Former Councilman Glenn Duncan argued from the floor of city hall that regardless of the petition "the reserve program is a good program."

Duncan said the signers were not backing up individuals who may be employed as reserves, rather "they are backing the reserve program."

Midway through the talks Councilman Earl Taylor and Mayor Vallerga exchanged heated debate with Taylor breaking off the discussion by telling Mrs. Vallerga:

"You haven't done a damn thing about (the proposed police reserves). Well, I'm trying to do something about it."

Mayor Vallerga countered that she only took exception with the methods in which the matter has been handled from its inception.

Less than a dozen persons, most of them members of the proposed reserve force, attended the meeting.

Taylor, noting reports that the police issue would be an attempt at "railroading" the police matter through the council would be made, pointed up the "remarkable job" Broadmoor has done in providing police protection to local businesses.

He said the city had no intention of getting rid of Broadmoor police and replacing them with reserves.

A report on the matter is expected at the next regular meeting in September.

Fact-Finding Report Stirs Angry Reaction

Greenwood 'Disappointed' In Results of Long Study

By FRANK LaPIERRE

Jefferson Elementary Schoool District Superintendent Frank Greenwood expressed disappointment Friday in a fact-finders' report that took months of preparation and thousands of dollars to complete.

The report composed by a three-member panel made up of attorneys Arthur Mendelson and Joseph R. Grodin and Ray Vetterlein, a professional negotiator, has come under fire from Greenwood and at least two members of the district's Board of Trustees.

Earlier this week Greenwood, in a letter to Mendelson, voiced "extreme displeasure" at the report being leaked at a San Francisco meeting of the State Legislative Committee allegedly by John Donaldson, a member of the California Teachers' Association.

This discussion of the report before it had been made public at a joint hearing of certificated district employees and the board was a violation of the State Education Code, Greenwood said.

Greenwood took the fact-finders to task for allegedly failing to articulate on several issues, plus their failure to present accurate findings in several instances, specifically references to proposals on salary and the income protecton plan which fact-finders apparently felt was poorly handled.

According to the report the income protection plan, costing some $92,500 a year, overlaps state retirement benefits and cites Education Code Section 14261 as authority for bringing such benefits into line to eliminate overlapping.

The superintendent called this analysis "completely erroneous" and pointed out the Education Code section used by the fact-finders dealt with teachers retired under disability.

"We don't have any teachers retired under this code section," Greenwood said.

He said his office contacted Bob Rhienhartd, an official associated with the State Teachers retirement system bureau in Sacramento, and was told his interpretation of the code secton was correct. However, AB 2189, passed at the last session of the Legislature, could affect the income protection plan in the district if Governor Reagan signs it into law. At that time, "we'll have to look into this," Greenwood said.

The report took what Greenwood felt was "unnecessary swipes" at the Board of Trustees and administration.

"They reported as if it was completely one-sided issue," he said.

Greenwood is the third district official to criticize the report.

Trustees (Mrs.) Dorothy Adams and (Mrs.) Beverly Forrester earlier shared the superintendent's views and said they would ask for an investigation regarding how the material got into the hands of Donaldson last month before district officials had the chance to review it.

There are other incorrect statements and inconsistencies in the report, according to Greenwood. These include discussions on salary, which the

'Extreme Displeasure' Over Leak of Report Expressed

Almost one year and several thousand dollars later the Jefferson Elementary School District's three-member Fact-Finding Committee has turned in its report on teacher-district relationships.

But the way it was brought to light has angered the district's top administrators and board members in Daly City.

Superintendent Frank L. Greenwood in a strongly worded letter to Committeeman Arthur Mendelson, dated Aug. 4, 1972, expressed his "extreme displeasure" upon being told by school Trustee Mrs. Beverly Forrester that the report had leaked out at a July meeting of the California Legislative Committee.

Greenwood labeled discussion of the report by California Teachers' Association employe John Donaldson at the San Francisco meeting as a violation of the State Education Code (Sec. 13087.1). He called it a complete lack of respect for the confidentiality of the findings.

Fact-finding reports are to be released jointly by the parties involved during a public meeting, in this case teachers and the board of trustees.

The panel was selected shortly after the September, 1971, strike of teachers in the JESD. Both sides had reached an impasse and agreed to involve the fact-finding team.

Under terms of the fact-finding agreement the parties did not make any recommendations on settlement of problems still outstanding in the district.

Some 270 teachers stayed off the job for almost five weeks last year. Since that time they received a 2 per cent pay increase, but little else.

A Superior Court ruling late last year knocked out one of their biggest demands — the issuance of a contract between teachers and the district.

This was held to be illegal by

San Bruno Council Rejects Request for Road Divider

Solid opposition by the businessmen of Mills Park Shopping Center resulted Monday in the San Bruno City Council turning down a request from the San Bruno police to put up a raised divider in the middle of San Bruno Avenue.

It would have cut off left turns entering and leaving Camino Plaza from San Bruno Avenue.

"There are other considerations than accidents," declared John Taft, attorney for the shopping center owner, G. W. Williams Co., "such as loss of business."

Police Capt. Bill Cann gave a unique presentation, using two television sets connected to a videotape machine, plus an overhead projector.

The television show depicted a drive down San Bruno Avenue showing the various traffic movements, described as harrowing by Capt. Cann, and as normal traffic by the protesters.

Capt. Cann reported that since Jan. 1, 1970, there had been 40 accidents at the Camino Plaza intersections. Thirty-three resulted from the intersection, 23 were preventable, resulting in 70 per cent of the accidents being preventable — meaning that a center dividing strip would have stopped them.

Other statistics were presented, however, by representative of Lyon's Coffee Shop, located right on the intersection itself. The firm had placed its own traffic counter on the street. In a 24-hour period, some 835 cars made left turns, of which 65 per cent turned into Lyons. This made 255,000 cars having made the turn since January 1, 1970, which he said, "was not a bad accident rate."

Surveys had shown, he said, that 35 per cent of his customers had not planned to come to Lyons but came on impulse.

"The left turn ban would cost us 25 per cent of our business," he asserted.

Lyons, he added, pays the city $6000 a year in sales tax and $3300 a year in property taxes.

Other protesters urged that the situation be remedied by a change in traffic signals. Gary Moundfrans suggested changing the phasing of the signals on El Camino Real so that left turn and through traffic do not occur at the same time. Frieda Berger of Portola Highlands said that she did not see why you could not install signals right on Camino Plaza.

Others proposed that signals be out on the Elm Avenue crossing — and Mayor George Corey uncovered the fact that this may be just one year away.

Councilman John Barnard, who lives within sight of the intersection, declared that he shops at Mills Park Center all the time, but he would not dare make a left turn on Camino Plaza.

"It would be suicide!"

He moved that the raised barrier be given a 90-day trial. The silence was deafening as his motion died.

Mayor George Cory declared that "I would like to see a more comprehensive breakdown of accidents to see how many of them included injuries."

Barnard retorted that wherever you have a high accident rate, it is inevitable that there be injuries too.

Corey finally declared that "we'll leave it here — unless the matter is raised again."

Daly City Council Holds Record Meet

It was a record long agenda that the Daly City Council breezed through on Monday.

Counting some last-minute additions, the items numbered 46 and dealt with everything from a personal injury lawsuit to rezoning of the Chinese Cemetery.

Except for the appearance of George Kirchhubel during the public forum section of the agenda, little or no discussion was held on the issues before them.

Kirchhubel suggested a Utility Commission be institute to take control of the city's water department along with lighting and other utilities. He scorched the council on several budget entries dealing with the water department and got into a minor debate with Councilman McRobert Stewart on the issue.

Stewart said, "I get a feeling you (Kirchhubel) are questioning the way we spend the money (in the water department) . . . accusing us of padding the budget."

Kirchhubel answered in the affirmative and further alleged such procedure has been "going on for years."

Asked how he knew this, by Stewart, Kirchhubel answered, "I've been watching the water department for over 40 years . . ."

"And I've watched them build a bridge. That doesn't make me a bridge builder," Stewart replied.

A utilities commission, Kirchhubel feels, would give continuity to the progress of the city's utility development projects.

"What one council can do another council can undo," Kirchhubel explained in suggesting those persons selected for such a commission be appointed to six-year terms.

The Kentucky Fried Chicken establishment on 1111 El Camino Real, South San Francisco was robbed of an undetermined amount of cash about 8:30 Sunday night by two pistol-wielding bandits, police said.

According to police reports, the men, described as Latin males in their mid-twenties, made employes lie down on the floor during the robbery.

Ukiah Post For Pacifica's City Manager

Pacifica's city council started off Monday morning with a personnel session in the basement of city hall to discuss the replacement of City Manager Jim Swayne.

Swayne, 30, has accepted a position as city manager in Ukiah, a city of 10,000 persons about a two hour drive north of the Bay Area. He signed a five-year contract with the city.

The young Pacifica city manager, who held that post for two of his seven years with the Coastside city, is scheduled to begin work in Ukiah on September 18. He will leave Pacifica's employ on September 8, however.

"I feel pretty good about it," said Swayne today. He was notified last Monday by Ukiah officials that he was the top choice of 140 applicants for the position.

"They (Ukiah officials) held up the release of (the appointment) until Thursday," said Swayne. He said he then notified the Pacifica council, which immediately set a personnel session for noon Saturday, and continued that session Monday morning.

"Compared to Pacifica, Ukiah is well-to-do," said Swayne. "It has about a $3.8 million budget and is in excellent financial condition. The city has a strong business district and a strong chamber of commerce. It owns its own water and electrical facilities."

Swayne said he considers the

Pacificans Adopt Iran Children

A Pacifica couple who went to Iran to adopt a baby girl came back from their trip with a bit more than they bargained for.

Instead of the girl, they returned with a brother and sister combination.

Mr. and Mrs. Al Gordon flew to Iran last month and found their plan to adopt a baby girl had become snarled in complications.

The result was to bring back the brother and sister, aged 4 and 3, respectively.

Having returned to Pacifica, the Gordons are now looking for a bigger home.

Gordon, a San Francisco policeman who is 50 (too old to adopt a child according to state law here), has had a fund started for him by his fellow officers.

An East Bay Link To Slaying in DC?

Homicide investigators from Daly City were expected to question John Mead Kennedy in connection with the savage slaying of pretty 18-year-old Linda Marie Nelson last month.

Sergeant John Kolbmann, in charge of the Nelson murder investigation, flew to Worland, Wyoming, Friday to talk to Kennedy.

Thus far, Kennedy, an ex-convict released from federal prison last year after serving a term for interstate car theft, has told police he committed two murders in Union City where he worked in a laundry.

Police from Alameda and El Dorado counties have questioned Kennedy in recent days concerning unsolved murders in their districts.

Kolbmann said circumstances surrounding the bloody murders of the two Union City youths was similar to that of Miss Nelson.

Linda Nelson was found hacked and slashed to death on a dusty dirt road some four blocks from her Mission street home by a nine-year-old bike rider shortly after 10 a.m. Sunday, July 23.

She had been stabbed 30 times. Her throat was slashed and there were 19 wounds in the head, a pathologist report said.

Kennedy allegedly told police in Worland he had slashed the throat of 14-year-old Vicky Lynn Iselin and stuffed her body beneath the porch of his step-parent's home in Union City.

Miss Iselin was believed by police to have stopped by Kennedy's home in Union City to discuss an outstanding debt owed to a member of the victim's family.

Linda Nelson had returned from her job as a waitress at a San Bruno restaurant and was taking her pet dog for a short walk late at night when she was attacked, according to police.

It was reported Kennedy earlier said he killed 15-year-old Mario Oliver of Hayward. Police in Union City found his body, but still have not been able to locate his head.

"The modus operandi in those cases being discussed (by Kennedy) have similarities to our case," Kolbmann said shortly before he left for Worland.

Kennedy is being held in Worland for allegedly attacking two teenagers with a knife.

Mother in D.C. Describes Her Slain Daughter's Last Hours

By LIN DAY

A Daly City mother today described in detail the last hours of her daughter's life in an exclusive Post interview in an effort to solve a savage slaying.

Pretty Linda Marie Nelson, 18, of Daly City, was murdered on a dirt road near the railroad tracks only a few short blocks to the rear of her home, 7324 Mission Street.

But bizarre clues have mounted, some of them indicating a possible connection to another similar murder a few months ago—in that case, another young girl was hacked and slain and left on a lonely road intersecting a mile away with the Coast highway.

Linda, a honey blonde, was slashed and stabbed at least 30 times, and her throat cut.

She had worked at the Pilgrim Pie Shoppe on El Camino Real in San Bruno, only a mile or so from where the other victim stepped off a late night bus and vanished.

Linda could have been followed home by her killer, after working late at the restaurant, and grabbed as she returned from walking the dog, her mother says.

Her mother, Mrs. Louis Nelson, who also works at the restaurant, said that she was in the kitchen waiting for Linda to return with the puppy, when she heard her voice.

It was loud enough to carry back to the second floor kitchen, and her mother assumed that Linda was saying goodnight, or calling a greeting to a passerby. She turned toward the front room and the door to greet her daughter.

Then she heard what she thought was the rattling of a wooden window being raised. Her daughter often came in through the porch window, she says, if the door was locked.

She hurried to the door to tell Linda it was open. There was no one there. But the puppy was over on the porch by the window. There was no car pulling away. Nothing.

She let the puppy in. Then, worried, she got a gun and went out, she said. There was still nobody there. At this point, she says, a neighbor drove up next door. She told him. He too got a gun, and each circled the large block.

At the far end of the block in back, the corner of Vale and Mateo streets, she heard a shrill short scream pierce the night air. It sounded like her daughter. It appeared to come from across the street somewhere, she said. She listened, but there was no sound.

Today, she says that possibly her daughter had been grabbed right on the porch, that the window sound could have been a quick scuffle, and that the puppy was down the porch because the killer had pulled Linda around the corner, onto a roof, out of sight, and was holding her silent there.

She had not looked in the dark alley or driveway behind the house. Now she feels that after she went out, the girl may have been dragged down the alley. It was a place she was always afraid to go, she said. From the alley, where there are empty, abandoned cars, one can go through to Mateo. It is only three blocks more to the murder site.

In the morning, she found a star, and the word "MEAT" cut into the porch rail, perhaps by a key or a knife, at exactly the spot where the puppy was

Council 'Punishes' Bruno Homeowner

San Bruno city councilmen cracked down Monday night on a Crestmoor homeowner whom they felt violated their trust — and they cracked down hard.

City Manager Gerald Minford reported that a resident of Piedmont Avenue, who had previously been granted special permission by the council to use four feet of land behind his house for mechanical equipment for his pool, had gone a little farther. The resident had cut down a tree and trimmed several pines down to five to six feet high.

The land in question is part of open-space acreage owned by the city.

At Minford's recommendation, they ordered the man to move a shed and equipment off of city property — and to plant five trees.

"It's a strong position," Minford said, "but our patience has been tried strongly."

Councilman Neil Christal added a complaint that the pool-owner also dumped a good deal of refuse on the city's land — and the council ordered that cleaned up too.

"You men are a lot nicer than I am," Councilman Margaret Kozkowski declared. "I'd shut down the pool and tell him what he can do with it."

In setting a time limit (15 days) Mayor George Corey suggested giving him time to make arrangements with a landscapist.

Law Signed, Yellow Cab Asks New Airport Fares

Increases adding approximately $2.50 to the $9.50 taxi fare between San Francisco and San Francisco International Airport were asked on Monday by the Yellow Cab Company of San Francisco.

The move came hard on the heels of Governor Ronald Reagan's approval of a new law making it a crime for any other cab company to operate on airport property.

That law is Senate Bill 1244, signed Friday by Governor Reagan after approval of both houses of the state legislature.

Under its provisions, San Francisco is empowered to grant exclusive fare pick-up rights to any taxi company of its choice, and authorized to forbid entry to the airport to any other cab company. The law provides that any cabdriver violating this law is guilty of a misdemeanor.

Such has been the city's position for years, without a specific law to back it up.

Milton Henke, spokesman for Peninsula independent cab drivers, commented:

"They've cut us off at the gate, now they're raising the ante."

William Ferdon, attorney for Yellow Cab of San Francisco, yesterday asked the city to raise the ante not only at the airport, but elsewhere.

He asked the San Francisco Board of Supervisors to increase basic San Francisco fare by 10 cents a mile, from the present 60 cents a mile to 70; and to substitute a $1 per cab passenger surcharge for the airport's existing fee of .0455 cents per deplaning passenger.

Yellow Cab of San Francisco says the average fare for the 15-mile ride from airport to downtown, "runs about $9.40."

At 10 cents a mile additional, plus an extra $1 for boarding the cab at the airport, that would mean $2.50 more per customer for Yellow.

The effect of the fare changes, said Ferdon, would be to shift the cost of the cab company's airport operating privileges, from the cab company to its customers.

Yellow of San Francisco now pays the city .0455 cents per deplaning passenger, even if the deplaning passengers all travel down the Peninsula by Greyhound. These fees amount to some $300,000 a year, Ferdon said.

He said the fare changes are necessary for Yellow to "survive virtually intact."

Ferdon said the fare increase request was based on economic necessity, and upon reactions to Yellow's recent suggestions that it might get out of business in San Francisco.

He noted that the supervisors had rejected a previous fare increase request, and said the new proposal was quite different.

The fare increase plea is expected to be sent to the San Francisco supervisors' Fire, Safety and Police committee for public hearings.

Construction Moratorium

The Pacifica City Council on Monday placed a 90-day building moratorium in that section of Sharp Park where there has been a continuing controversy over location of a pier and outfall line to the ocean.

The vote was 4-1 with Councilman Harlan Minshew against it.

Immediately the council was charged with being vindictive.

The council said it wanted the moratorium so it could have an opportunity to speak with those Sharp Park residents finding disfavor with council action to locate the pier in a primarily residential area.

"Do you need a moratorium to talk to them? Or is it to get back at them for filing a suit against you?" asked resident Tup Fisher.

Five residents of the area immediate to where the 1,000-foot fishing pier and outfall line is proposed to be located have filed a suit to stop its construction.

The suit is attempting to force a study of the environmental impact such a facility would have in the area.

Councilman Nick Gust proposed the moratorium, saying "the city will pay in the end" for all the hassle about where the pier should go.

He suggested the moratorium include a staff review of the area on the possibility of rezoning the entire area for single-family residential use.

The adopted emergency ordinance specified that the moratorium include the area west of Paloma Avenue to the Sharp Park Golf Course and from Francisco Boulevard to the ocean.

It will not affect any construction in progress, nor any for which building permits have been issued. This includes the outfall line and pier.

Also excluded was a strip of commercial area one lot deep on either side of Palmetto Avenue.

Minshew asked what would be done about the non-conforming use that would be created if the area were made single-family because there are already apartments in the area.

"Grandfather it out," said Gust.

"Mr. Gust is putting it (the moratorium) in as a pique because he has a suit on his hands," said realtor John Geary. He noted that the Sharp Park residents had been given a year to work out their own plan for the area and single family is not what they want.

"They want a mix," said Geary. "They want to retain the present character of R1, R2 and R3 (single, multiple and high density residential)."

City Attorney John Sherman, however, said that he had talked with Tom Adams, legal aid attorney for the residents filing the suit, and was told that Adams' clients "would welcome rezoning of the property to R1."

Mayor Grace McCarthy said the moratorium would not affect the plan being drafted by the residents one way or the other.

Councilman Stan Farber expressed frustration at "being told a different thing by everyone I talk to." He said he had been of the impression that feedback the council had been receiving was that they were not doing what the residents wanted.

It has been stated earlier by the council that there was no support for the residents' objection to locating the proposed outfall and pier at Santa Rosa Avenue and Beach Boulevard.

Kay Grottum, vice-president of the Sharp Park Improvement Council presented a resolution of the San Mateo County Regional Group of the Sierra Club which asked in support of the residents that the environmental impact be studied.

the court. The decison is presently on appeal.

The panel itself was made up of Joseph R. Grodin, Ray Vetterlein and Mendelson.

In their 53-page report the fact-finders traced the history of the teacher-district dispute and major obstacles remaining between each party.

Noting that the meet and confer process under provisions of the Winton Act is a relatively new requirement, the panel suggested parties involved "approach each other in a spirit of confidence and trust and with a willingness to examine the views of the other, even though there may not be initial agreement."

Both sides should display a willingness to try to understand the other side, the report indicated.

For the school board the fact finders had a special word:

The Board should better coordinate its views with their representatives prior to meeting with teacher representatives.

In the past, the board rejected all approaches made by the opposite side in the talks, the fact finders pointed out.

This was not a proper attitude, they felt.

"The members of the school board do not have to participate directly in teacher-district meetings) but they should make certain their representatives are expressing correctly the philosophy of the Board. . . ." the report said.

A breakdown in communications between both sides was blamed by the fact finders for the failure of the meet-and-confer process to reach its intended goal.

It was under this cloud the fact finding team was formed in 1971.

Earlier this year one member of the fact-finding panel representing the school district, Robert D. Harrison, resigned his post, blasting the district for what he called "a waste of taxpayers money."

Top district administrators were scolded on occasion for contributing to the widening communications gap between the district and teachers and talks finally broke down.

Even methods under which fact finding itself operates came under criticism from the three members.

It was suggested certain revisions be made, including establishment of a statutory procedure for selecting a neutral party in the event the three members are unable to agree; time limits be set for fact finding; and authority set forth to make recommendations.

The history of the fact finding panel, according to the final report, was often rattled with turmoil, as in the case of Harrison's resignation in which he also stated an "atmosphere of conflict" existed getween the school board and Greenwood.

Although trustees Mrs. Beverly Forrester and Mrs. Dorothy Adams have already expressed their unhappiness over what they both term "a nothing report," the fact-finders themselves feel credit should be given for solving several issues.

Of the 16 plus articles in dispute prior to the hearings, ten remain, the report noted.

Those issues not resolved as of the date of the report were: economic issues (wage, salary proposals and fringe benefits); language issues concerning such matters as teaching conditions and hours, school councils and effect of rules, regulations and policies among other items.

found. The killer could have waited there.

She found, early the following morning, as she rewalked her night vigil, scuffle marks on a lawn at Mateo, next to the alley-drive entrance.

Her daughter would have put up a battle, she said.

There is considerable evidence of a psychopath.

A few weeks before the murder, Linda told her mother that while she was doing the laundry, a man came up and asked to purchase the socks she was wearing.

The girl sold them to him for two dollars.

About a week before the murder, she told her mother she had seen the man from the laundromat meeting again, this time on the street. He had walked up and asked to buy her socks again, she said, saying that he collected socks. This time, she refused.

She went camping with her boy friend and two others that week. While she was away, the phone rang one night. The mother answered it. There was only breathing for a long minute. Then a click.

The night before the murder, the phone rang. Linda answered.

She told her mother it was a "young" voice. The caller immediately told the girl that he wanted a sexual relation with her, in blunt terms. The girl did not hang up, but tried to question the man, she told her mother.

He appeared not even to know what she looked like, knew nothing about her; and Linda hung up.

Who was the caller?

Was he the man Linda and a girl friend had met in San Francisco a few months earlier, and foolishly given her phone number to?

That man had called and become very upset when she was out, the mother said.

Was he one of the people who had appeared after the crime?

One man sent the mother $400 from across the Bay, saying that he and his friends sympathized with her.

Was he the person who placed a copy of a daily newspaper, with a stone atop it, and containing a picture of Linda and account of the crime, exactly where the body was found, a day after the finding?

Mrs. Nelson found the paper and stone when she viewed the scene.

Mrs. Nelson says that her daughter had been going to a small private beach near the nudist beach north of San Gregorio, with a girl friend. One man had come up to her daughter there recently and asked her to work for him in a topless bar. Linda had laughed it off, but told her mother about it.

"She always told me," her mother said. "We were very close. She said, 'I'm no dancer.'"

Nor was the study to present any recommendations in its report.

All parties involved in the issue — teachers, board and administration — have the same understanding, that the final decisions must be made by each party.

Greenwood feels the fact-finders "really fell down in the area of comparative rankings of Bay Area school districts.

The report merely reiterates what the board and teachers already know — that the JESD ranks 19th of 36 school districts, Greenwood said.

Approval of bids received for construction of the Westlake Park Community Center were approved by the council.

The awarding of the bid by the Westlake Subdivisions Improvement Association is expected to be made to Welch Construction company for $394,756. It is a joint venture agreement between the city and WSIA.

The council ignored three officials of the Daly City Scavenger Company present at the meeting and quickly approved a two week extension of the contract the scavengers now have with the Coastside Scavenger company of Pacifica. The contract with Coastside was scheduled to expire this week.

More time is needed to work out details of the Coastside-Daly City contract, it was understood.

Young Voter Drive Slated

The North San Mateo County Young Voters to Re-elect President Nixon will conduct a registration drive Thursday as part of a nationwide campaign to register 18- to 30-year-olds.

"Young people are looking for a chance to have a direct impact on this year's election, and registration drives are the single most important thing they can do right now," declarec Bob Naylor, county chairman of the organization.

Karczewski Still Hits At Police in Pacifica

Ray Karczewski was at it again Monday night.

Karczewski, the former Pacifica policeman, is still fighting city hall, and apparently losing.

During the "oral communications" segment of the council meeting he again stood up to denounce the city's closing of its "investigation" of his various charges against the city's police department.

He was begrudgingly given five minutes to speak his piece, then cut off swiftly with the interjection of "time" by City Attorney John Sherman and the announcement of a 10-minute recess by Mayor Grace McCarthy.

"There will be an investigation," promised Karczewski. He said the council was under the "misapprehension" that the power lies with them. "The power belongs to those on this side of the lecturn," he said.

Councilman Nick Gust interrupted and said that if Karczewski was "going over the same ground" he was out of order because the council has taken its position on his complaint.

Karczewski reminded Gust that oral communications allowed him to speak, "unless you want to legislate against oral communications."

According to Karczewski "(City Manager Jim) Swayne never spent 15 minutes with me. This is a glaring inaccuracy," he said in refuting the council's position paper issued at the last council meeting, and as far as they are concerned closing the matter.

He noted that the local paper had, ("before the ink was dry") on the position paper, an extensive report in which Police Chief Mel Nelson "admitted to at least six charges (of Karczewski) that had merit." The council position paper listed two.

Karczewski said he at no time contacted the district attorney on the matter. It was reported in the position paper that the district attorney's office refused to look at his charges.

The policeman,turned-security patrol operator said the council based its decision "merely on the image (of the police department). I'm not here to discuss image, but what they're actually doing," said Karczewski.

He was charging the council with government "of the few, by the few, for the few" when Mayor McCarthy, slamming the gavel, called for a 10-minute recess.

"That's the rules," she said.

"You seem to make the rules up as you go along," retorted Karczewski, turning around and heading back to his seat.

S.S.F. Boy in 2-Story Fall

A four-year-old South San Francisco boy is in satisfactory condition today at Mary's Help Hospital in Daly City where he is recuperating from injuries sustained in a fall from a second-story window last Friday.

Police said little John Taylor of 388 Susie Way fell the two stories and landed on his head on a cement patio. According to police, at the scene he was unconscious at first, then regained consciousness and began to complain that his head hurt.

D.C. Widow May Own a Turner Worth $50,000

A painting an elderly widow has kept in her home may be a work by J. W. M. Turner worth as much as $50,000, an art expert says.

Hatti Scarlett of Daly City said she consulted some experts Carr Howe, director emeritus of the Palace of the Legion of Honor museum, who declared Friday: "It probably is a Turner, although I am not ready to take an oath on it."

Turner was a nineteenth-century landscape painter often considered the father of impressionism. Some of the works he painted before his death in 1951 on an old landscape her late husband's Scottish family had saved for more than 100 years.

It was examined by Thomas were among his poorest, and Howe says Mrs. Scarlett's could be one of them

Nevertheless, William H. Hassebrook of the Art Resources Institute of San Francisco said it could bring up to $50,000. One Turner painting done in is prime sold in 1965 for $246,000, Hassebrook said. He and a colleague have agreed to attempt to sell the painting for Mrs. Scarlett.

The painting features the Piazza San Marco as seen from the Gran Canale of Venice and is called "Venice Sunrise." It was on display at the Embarcadero Center branch of Security Pacific Bank in San Francisco.

State Buys More Land for Freeway

The State Division of Highways has purchased a major piece of private property in Pacifica and earmarked it as right-of-way for Freeway 380. from San Bruno to the Coastside.

Two weeks ago, a special citizen study committee comprised of two Pacificans, two San Brunans and an impartial third party had recommended on a 3-2 vote that Sharp Park Road should be improved before 380 be considered at all.

In addition a court injunction against construction from the San Bruno side is still in effect.

The property purchase involved is an approximately 12-acre tract known as Vallemar Gardens, owned by Bernard Price. The purchase was confirmed by Division of Highways Project Engineer Jim Rae. No sale price figure was announced.

Plans for 380 show the road coming directly through the Orchid Farm tract. Price has said he intends to move his orchid-growing business from its present location across Coast Highway from Mori's Point Road.

County supervisors earlier this week on a 4-0 vote moved to support a Greater Transportation Committee recommendation which included a proposal that 380 be built to the coast.

Boy Injured Watching 3-Car Crash

An eight-year-old Burlingame boy, looking on at an accident near his home, was told to step back and stepped into the path of a passing auto on Friday. He was hurled 18 feet.

Three North County women were injured in the original two-car accident on the Bayshore Freeway. The women were all in satisfactory condition today at Mary's Help Hospital, Daly City.

The boy, Troy Anthony Piegaia, son of Mr. and Mrs. Reno Piegaia of 933 Rollins Road, suffered a head injury, lacerations and contusions. He was admitted overnight to Peninsula Hospital and discharged, in satisfactory condition, today.

California Highway Patrol investigators said the accident occurred a mile north of Peninsula intersection. A pickup truck driven by Robrt Neal, 24, of Campbell, skidded to avoid suddendly slowed traffic southbound. The truck reportedly swerved in front of a car driven by Erma Messina, 52, of Colma. The pickup then began to tip over and was struck by Mrs. Messina's car.

Mrs. Messina suffered a fractured pelvis, bruises and abrasions. Her passengers, Rose Martini, 81, and Palmira Tuccuri, both of 35 First Avenue, Daly City, suffered minor injuries.

Police said the Piegaia boy was one of a group of neighborhood youngsters who had gone to the fence separating Rollins Road from the Bayshore, to watch the accident scene.

As the tow truck worked to push the overturned truck back onto its wheels, police shouted to the boys to get back. The Piegaia boy stepped back about three steps, into the path of a northbound car driven by David G. Baxter, 25, of 417 Rollins Road, Burlingame.

Baxter's view of the boy watchers was obscured by the shrubbery that lines the fence, police indicated. He applied brakes as Piegaia appeared in his path but the boy was struck and hurled to the pavement.

Thief Leaves Possessions

A would-be burglar made a hasty retreat from an Alta Mesa Drive home in South San Francisco at about noon Wednesday when the daughter of the family returned for lunch and found a man inside the residence.

Police said that when Laurie Shreve entered the front door she confronted a white man described as about 45, of medium build, with grey hair, and wearing a blue sweater and tan trousers.

According to police, the man failed at an attempt to get out a locked back door and ran quickly out the front. In his haste he left behind a nylon jacket and a pocket knife, police said.

$10.000 Cash For Accident

A fifth cash award has been made as a result of a February 10, 1969 commuter train accident in San Bruno in San Francisco superior Court.

Jack F. Neff, 32, 1120 East Hillsdale Boulevard, San Mateo, won a $10,000 award for injuries suffered in the crash, in which a 50-foot length of pipe being laid near the tracks thrust into the north-bound commuter train car.

Four persons died and 17 were injured in the unusual accident and several other suits have been filed. Neff originally sued for $100,000.

The defendant in all cases is Southern Pacific Pipeliners, Inc., a subsidiary of Southern Pacific Transportation Co. and Alex Robertson-Bakersfield Construction Co.

This firm's crews were laying pipe that morning when one length being hoisted on a boom swung into the path of an oncoming commute train at 8 a.m. The engine hit one end of the pipe, swinging it around where it speared the first double-deck passenger car behind the engine and was driven upward at a 45-degree angle and out the other side of the car.

Pacifica Park Annex Sought

Another step in the acquisition of property for San Pedro Valley Park adjacent to Pacifica is being recommended to the County Board of Supervisors by County Manager M. D. Tarshes.

He is asking the board to set a hearing (probably for September 5) on the purchase of 3.78 acres from Challenge Development, Inc., within Pacifica as an access area to the park. With the newest acquisition, Tarshes reports, the county will have acquired all but 31 acres of the proposed 457-acre park site.

Millbrae Historical Research

The Millbrae Historical Society announces a new due date on its annual research awards competition. To allow more time for preparation and additional research, at the suggestion of college and high school instructors working with the students, the date has been forwarded to October 15.

This additional time will allow student researchers to work through the summer months, if so desired, and allow for a broader scope of participation.

Awards of $100 first prize, $50 second prize, $25 third prize and five honorable mention awards will be presented for the student research papers of at least 5,000 words, telling some phase of Millbrae's past.

Rules for the competition are available from the society by writing P.O. Box 511, Millbrae, and also at the Millbrae Chamber of Commerce, as well as from history instructors at all local high schools and the College of San Mateo and Skyline College.

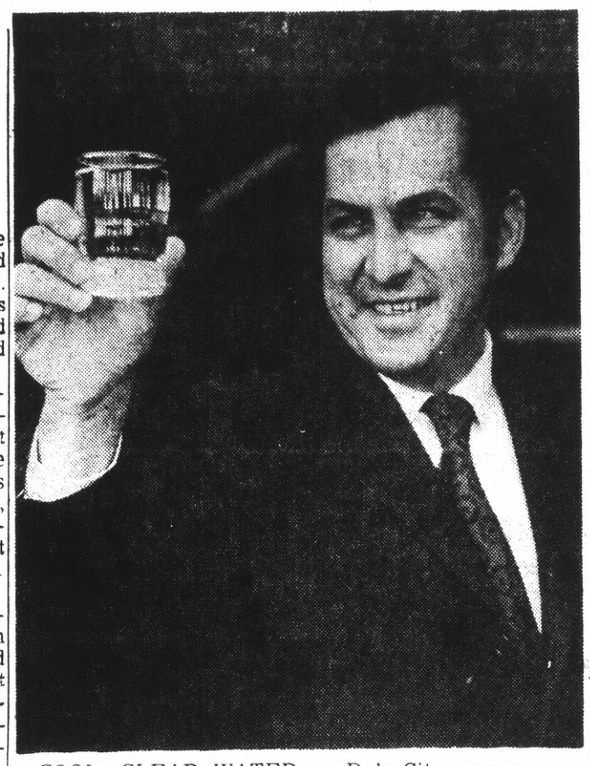
Fire-Theft Plot Jails Bruno Youths

Three youths were arrested Thursday by San Bruno police who booked them for investigation of arson and conspiracy. Police allege that the trio had planned to commit a burglary under cover of a fire.

Arrested were two brothers, Ronald J. Oneto, 19, and Frank Oneao, 20, of 356 Chapman Avenue and a 16-year-old boy.

According to police, the suspects met for coffee Wednesday night and planned their escapade. They then drove around and decided to attack a car parked near San Mateo and Angus Avenues, police said. They bashed in a car window, tossed in gasoline, then a lighted match, and retreated, according to police.

Police stopped them near Garden Lane, a few blocks away, before any burglary took place. The fire went out before the car was destroyed.



COOL, CLEAR WATER — Daly City mayor pro-tempore Louis J. Papan offers a toast to "Better Water Week" in his city. He proclaimed August 13 thru 20 as a week set aside to emphasize the role water plays in the lives of all citizens.
(Post Photo by George Brooke)

'Better Water Week' in D.C.

By FRANK LaPIERRE

Reams of paperwork pours forth from government agencies daily on the consumption of everything from soup to nuts, both items abundantly available in California.

But little is said, either in writing or vocally, about H20 — that life-sustaining liquid which is becoming more expensive to obtain, not to mention the fact it is on the verge of becoming undrinkable in many areas due to pollution form every side.

This week, Daly City Mayor Pro-tempore Louis J. Papan, in support of the American Water Works Association, proclaimed August 13 through 20 as "Better Water for Daly City" week.

To celebrate the event, Papan raised a glass of (clean) water in a special toast:

"I sincerely urge all citizens to join with me in seeking a wider understanding of the contributions, the services, and the future needs of the Daly City Municipal Water Department and in lending our air toward achievement of its goals," he said.

Daly City, like several other San Mateo County communities, gets much of its water from the Hetch Hetchy water system owned by San Francisco.

The city also owns deep water wells which are the main source of water. This water table, however, is declining and efforts are now being made to protect the well water from pollution.

A study on this was recently completed by Kirker-Chapman Engineering.

Noting that the residents of this city are dependent "for their health, comfort and standard of living" upon a continued abundance of water, Papan said the goal of water utilities everywhere is to provide better water for everyone — "All the water people need when and where they need it."

The American Water Works Association is a non-profit scientific and educational society dedicated to improving water service to the public.

While emphasizing Daly City thus far enjoys clean water, Papan said, "Our goal is to insure it remains pure for future generations."

Millbrae Rec Trip Slated

The Millbrae Park and Recreation Department is planning a trip to Frontier Village today.

The trip will mark the end of the summer travel trip program offered by the department. The trip is for boys and girls 6-12 years. Children interested should sign up with their local playground leader. The cost is $4.25, including bus fare and unlimited rides at the park.

The Annual Penny Carnival will be held at the Millbrae Community Center Friday. This year's carnival will conclude the summer recreation playground program.

Crime Does Pay?

From an incident that occurred Thursday in South San Francisco, one could get the impression that petty thievery pays.

According to police a man, described as about 25, standing 5-8 and weighing about 160 pounds, was caught rummaging through the purse of a female employe in the office of industrial section of the city. Police said the man explained to the persons who saw him that he was in the office "looking for a job."

Meditation Course Offered in S.S.F.

Another course in "transcendental meditation" will be offered, starting with an introductory lecture on August 16 at the West Orange Library in South San Francisco at 7:30 p.m.

The class is offered by the International Meditation Society center in San Francisco, one of 16 in the nation, which its area coordinator here claims has taught transcendental meditation, or TM, to 150,000 persons in the past six years and has doubled it own size in the past single year.

Very basically, and according to institute literature, TM is practiced for a few minutes morning and evening as one sits comfortably with eyes closed.

"During this time the mind experiences subtler state of thought as physiological changes occur which correspond to this refined mental activity. Scientific investigation has found that during the period of TM oxygen consumption, carbon dioxide elimination, cardiac output, heart rate and respiratory rate significantly decrease. The metabolic rate is reduced by an average of 20 per cent." it said.

TM can be taught and it really works toward carrying on his activities without accumulated stress and strain of modern life and with increased clarity of perception, the area coordinator, Charles Utzman said.

"Anyone who can think can meditate and the effects are immediate and accumulative," he went on.

It amounts to a better, fuller, more alert life, as he himself said he has found. Utzman, 32, was a senior structural engineer at Northrup Aviation in Ventura until 1970, where he did stress analysis of earth re-entry on the Apollo capsule.

He later supervised seat building for airliners, but, "The people and I were so stressed we just weren't happy. I decided there must be more to life."

He was trained in TM by Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, its founder, at a training session at Estes Park, Colo.

Utzman's assistant lecturer will be Carol Gorman, 23, who joined a class of 2,000 TM trainees with the Yogi in Majorca and Fiuggi, Italy, in his last six-month course.

The courses here consist of two introductory lectures of one to 1½ hours each, a two-hour individual instruction session on a weekend and three evening group meetings of about two hours each. There also are social activities, such as picnics and walks in the park, Utzman said.

The cost of the course is $75 for working adults and $45 for college students, he said.

The society is a non-profit educational organization, he said, and "instructing" is going on about every week, both from the San Francisco and Palo Alto centers.

Its students include every walk of life "from engineers to housewives and physicians to students," Utzman said.

But this type of course does lean toward "more professional people, those who get the most weight of strains and stress and tensions of life," he went on.

Class sizes have been from 10 to 50 people and more classes are planned to be offered in Pacifica and San Bruno in the near future, the coordinator said.

"Transcendental meditation is so simple and natural that anyone can do it without any particular diet or physical practice," Utzman said, adding that there are no deleterious side effects.

Bruno Boy Wounded In Gun Play

A game of cops and robbers that some boys were playing at home while mother was away shopping became too realistic Thursday in San Brunos Pacific Heights neighborhood.

A 12-year-old boy was shot above the heart with a .38-caliber revolver.

According to San Bruno police, there were two guns in the house, one kept in the mother's night-stand, and the other by the grandmother's bed. The boys found them and were playing with them.

The 12-year-old was waving a .22-caliber pistol that was unloaded, and his 10-year-old visitor was holding the .38-caliber revolver. Neither boy dreamed that the .38 was kept loaded by the mother for self-protection. It went off and the 12-year-old yelled, "You shot me, you shot me."

The 10-year-old dashed from the house, police say, screaming "I didn't mean it!"

Although shot right above his heart, the victim—police say—was apparently not critically hurt. The bullet passed cleanly through him and no surgery was necessary.

Mateo Loot Recovered in Daly City

Daly City police have recovered $600 worth of property, apparently stolen from a San Mateo man's apartment several weeks ago.

Horace L. Williams, 34, whose apartment is on Delaware Street, reported that he was contacted by Daly City police, who said they had taken a man into custody who had several property deeds, U.S. savings bonds, a gold watch and some jewelry which they thought belonged to Williams.

Williams identified the items and they were returned to him. He told police the articles were stored in a metal box which he thought he had only misplaced somewhere in his apartment.

Police speculate that the box was stolen from the apartment more than two weeks ago.

Capuchino Duo Teach at CCSF

Two instructors from Capuchino High School at San Bruno, Dagny Golladay and Milton McDowell, served as members of the summer faculty at City College of San Francisco Hotel and Restaurant Department to instruct teachers from other California High Schools in organizing FEAST-Hospitality Education programs in their respective high schools.

The appointments were in recognition of Mrs. Golladay's and Mr. McDowell's success in teaching segments of the FEAST program at Capuchino High School. Mrs. Golladay serves as FEAST Foods Lab instructor and McDowell teaches FEAST Business courses at the high school.

S.S.F. Report Sees Big Annual Savings

By BOB PETERSON

The operation of South San Francisco's new Department of Ecological Development (DED) is costing the city an estimated $84,000 anunally.

Prior to the recent municipal reorganization, the yearly operating cost to the city was $200,000.

The reorganization eliminated the city's engineering department and put all public works and park and recreation operations under one consultant head.

These cost comparison figures is Bay Area vice president of VTN, acting as South San Francisco's city engineer and direcwere released last week by that consultant head, Fred Hull. He tor of DED.

The operation cost of DED includes salaries for co-director Larry Ross, secretary Ruth Wilson and the part-time services of Al Dellepiane. Hull explained that Dellepiane, a hold-over from the old engineering department to do public works inspections, will be reassigned half time to the street division because of a decline in building activity.

The DED cost also includes the $31,140 original contract for VTN providing DED services. That contract, however, did not include duties as director of parks and recreation, according to Hull. He said he agreed to do that work for an additional $11,124, which is added in to the $84,000 figure.

Hull also included $340 for "services provided by VTN that the former engineering division would have performed," and $1,545.19 for "projects that were performed by VTN that would not have been handled by former staff but would have been contracted to a consultant."

This $1,454.19 was for a sewer infiltration study ordered by the Water Quality Control Board, according to Hull.

By comparison Hull showed that the former engineering operation figure included, aside from the last two items, salaries only. These were of the assistant city manager (Larry Ross, now co-director of DED), all the personnel of the old engineering division, the former director, and secretary to the former director, of parks and recreation.

Hull released this breakdown, plus a more extensive explanation of the estimated $400,000 cost savings in the reorganized government, in a three-page report.

He said the report contains all the information given to the council, "except those matters pertaining to personnel."

It's the "personnel" issue that has created most of the furor, particularily the elimination of the city's engineering department. This led to fears among other employes of layoffs and led to a strike threat.

According to Hull's report, a special study comparing that former department's over-all services, plus consultant services farmed out by the city before the advent of VTN, showed that the cost of the city's engineering operation in 1971-72 was $214,276.

Hull said that if those same combined activities for the same period were performed entirely by a consultant (such as VTN) the cost would have been $160,307. The difference (claimed as possible savings) is $53,969.

The reason this cost saving could be made, according to Hull, is that the city would get (engineering) "services when needed, and when they're not needed (the city) does not pay for it." So that $53,969 is the first leg in the estimated $400,000 savings.

Hull's cost disclosure also included a "unit cost comparison" based on three-year average budgets of South San Francisco with five other cities, Concord, San Mateo, Redwood City, Mountain View and Millbrae.

Based on average unit prices paid for the various divisions within the city, Hull's report compared South San Francisco's planning, building, engineering, streets and parks with those other five cities.

The results presented to the council showed, according to Hull, that South San Francisco could realize a possible 13 per cent cost savings in the building division, 18 per cent in streets and 33 per cent in the city's park and recreation department.

That is a potential savings of $10,397 in building, $92,685 in the street division and $252,369 in parks and recreation, for a total of $355,451. Add the $53,969 projected savings in the engineering department and the total is $409,420.

In addition, according to Hull, the city is in effect saving money by not filling the director of parks and recreation post vacated when Bob Maxey resigned to go to Salem, Oregon.

The addition of $11,124 for DED to perform these duties is figured in as savings.

It was also pointed out that the city saved $9,962 by not retaining the services of airport noise specialist Maurice Garbell.

These last two "savings-by-reducing-costs" amount to $21,086, and added to the $409,420, Hull comes up with a possible $430,506 total savings.

The city's planning department, incidentally, rated number two in the list of six cities, indicating that it was operating number two in the list of six cities, indicating that it was operating 25 per cent better than the average, based on average unit prices.

Hull said the $400,000 savings will come about through a combination of attrition, possible shifting of employes within various DED divisions, freeze on hirings and in some cases allowing a normal growth to meet the expanded division budget.

He said studies similar to the in depth one done on the city's engineering department, and resulting in its elimination, is now being done in the street and parks divisions.

Hull quickly pointed out, however, that employes need not fear for their jobs. Employes recently signed a memorandum of understanding that insured their jobs—at least for another year.

"These are not punitive studies," said Hull. "They represent areas of possible cost savings, and at no time did we (VTN) imply or infer it (the $400,000 savings) would be guaranteed.

"If we have too many people in any one division, and this is proven so by studies, we will try to hold the line on hiring additional personnel," he said.

Hull's report said "extreme efforts" were made to develop an equitable comparison between the six cities. The comparisons used for building departments were based on the dollar value of building permits issued over the three-year period.

In the street department, comparison was based on the miles of streets maintained, and activities performed in conjunction with the maintenance of those streets.

The park department was based on a comparison of the population served and monies expended.

Hull said that a review of activities to date indicates that within the first two months of (VTN) service over-all costs (to the city) have been reduced by $10,208 a month, based on one full year of projected service.

In defense of the street division's apparent "cost over-run," Hull said it is due to continuing requests for carpenters, electricians and general maintenance men by all other city departments. These costs had always been borne by the street division but will now be placed in respective budgets of those desiring the services.

Hull said other anticipated cost savings in the street division will be made by purchasing longer lasting paint to double the life of street centerlines.

In the city's sewer treatment plant, an electric monitoring device for all pump stations is being installed, negating the services of two sewer treatment men (who have other jobs) for a savings of $22,000 annually.

The city has in the past been paying approximately $20,000 annually to maintain the city's marina. Hull, to counteract this deficit, has proposed an expanded program toward continued development of the marina as a revenue producing operation.

"The revenue from the addition of one or two restaurants, shops and boating related stores would cover the entire budget for that facility," said Hull.

Hull said that in order to reduce the number of overtime hours in the planning division, the city has ceased to provide free drafting services to the general public for the purpose of making zoning changes, use permit and variance applications.

Asked why this information had not been released earlier, Hull said:

"For the first month I tried to develop trust and a working relationship with division heads to show them that the sole purpose (of VTN) was to give the city a more efficient, less costly and better operation that could provide expansion if necessary."

Good morning, good cooks!

Today's column will concentrate on lamb and some new and tried and true ways to serve this tasty meat.

SPANISH LAMB

2 pounds lamb shoulder
5 slices bacon
¼ cup flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 medium onion, sliced
6 small carrots
2 cups tomato juice
2 cups diced celery
½ teaspoon powdered sage
½ teaspoon powdered thyme
1 Tablespoon vinegar
¼ cup chopped green pepper

Dice the five slices bacon and fry in Dutch oven until lightly browned, about 5 minutes. Cut the lamb into serving pieces and dip in the fourth cup flour which has been combined with the teaspoon salt. Brown the lamb and the sliced onion in bacon fat. Cook slowly about 10 minutes.

Add the six carrots, two cups tomato juice, two cups diced celery, half teaspoon each sage and thyme, one tablespoon vinegar and fourth cup chopped green pepper. Cover and cook slowly about 1½ hours or until tender.

A leg of lamb is easy to cook and serve and if you are fortunate enough to have left-overs, it makes a tasty meal the second time around.

LAMB AND RICE BAKE

2 medim onions, chopped
2 Tablespoons lamb fat
2 cups ground roast lamb
2 cups cooked rice (½ cup raw)
1 can tomatoes, drained (19 oz.)
1½ teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon paprika
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1 slice bacon diced

Brown the two medium onions in the two tablespoons lamb fat. (If you don't have lamb fat, use oil or butter). Add the two cups lamb, two cups cooked rice, one can tomatoes, one and one-half teaspoons salt, one teaspoon each paprika and Worcestershire sauce. Mix well. Pack into a greased 1½ quart baking dish. Sprinkle with the diced bacon and bake in 375-degree oven about 45 minutes. Serves 4.

Another way to make lamb a treat the second time around is this casserole, with its border of fluffy mashed potatoes.

LAMB CASSEROLE

5 cups hot, seasoned mashed potatoes
¼ cup butter
¼ cup flour
2 cups milk
1 teaspoon salt
2 cups cooked lamb, cubed
1 cup cooked peas, drained
1 cup cooked, diced carrots
1 small onion, grated

Melt the fourth cup butter in saucepan, blend in the fourth cup flour and one teaspoon salt. Slowly add the two cups milk, stirring constantly until sauce thickens and boils. To this sauce add the two cups lamb, one cup each peas and carrots and the grated onion. Mix and set aside covered.

Line a 1½ quart baking dish with mashed potatoes, spreading evenly over bottom and sides. Pour in creamed mixture and bake in 375-degree oven for 30 minutes or until potatoes are lightly browned.

Serves 4.

Choraliers Present Program

The South San Francisco Choraliers, directed by Roy Marlow and accompanied by Mrs. Lynn Beck of Daly City, presented a program of patriotic music titled "America, Our Heritage," for the patients of Cerro Garden Convalescent Hospital in Daly City and for the residents of Rotary Plaza in South San Francisco.

Four of the Choraliers were performing for the first time. They were Mrs. Kathy Neybert, alto, Mrs. Maura Wait, alto, Mrs. Marion Sharfie, soprano, and Mrs. Bonnie Brewer, soprano. A fifth new member Miss Carolyn Wait, was returning from a European vacation and unable to perform.

At Armed Forces Day, the Choraliers' versatility was exhibited by a medley of four service songs, Air Force Blues, Marine's Hymn, Navy Hymn and The Army Goes Rolling Along.

The highlight of the evening's performances was the Choraliers rendition of The Battle Hymn of the Republic.

Anyone interested in joining the Choraliers should contact Mrs. O'Bryant of the South San Francisco Park and Recreation Department (JU 8-6200, ext. 8.)

Musician Plans Band In D.C.; Asks Support

Daly City musicians, both high school and adult, will have a chance to participate in a revival of the long disbanded Daly City Band.

Henry Niebolt, South San Francisco teacher, professional musician and Daly City resident at 70 Baldwin Ave., announced that he is organizing the band to its once successful status as a top amateur concert group in northern San Mateo county.

Nieboit is asking all interested amateur concert band musicians of high school level and qualified adult amateur musicians to attend the August 23rd meeting of the Daly City Recreation Commission.

Final approval by the Commission to organize the band will be given only if a large number of interested local musicians will support Niebolt and his proposal.

A need exists for community musicians to participate in a non-union band with evening concerts and rehearsals, Niebolt said.

Niebolt said he has a library of over 750 band selections of every description: Broadway show tunes, opera, solo music, waltzes, circus gallops and marches, standard band selections and over 250 assorted marches. Most of the music is on an upper performance level so that advanced musicians are preferred at the present time. Here is a sampling of the kinds of music to be performed: Rakoczy March — Berlioz, Nutcracker Suite — Tchaikowsky, Rienzi Overture by Wagner and Colossus of Columbia March by Russell Alexander.

Musicians would have a chance, Wiebold said, to perform band music seldom heard on current radio and TV. High school students would have an interesting challenge beyond their high school music curriculum, he added.

The original Daly City Band goes back to the directorship of the late George E. Brenner, who began the group in the 1920's, ending with his death in 1965.

Niebolt is principal tuba player of Golden Gate Park Band under Ralph Murray and the Marin Symphony Orchestra under Stanford University's Sandor Salgo. He has performed under Krips, Samuel and Farberman in the San Francisco and Oakland Symphonies and the San Francisco Opera. He was a member of the old Daly City Band under Brenner while attending high school in 1945 and stayed with the band for about 10 years.

With the cooperation of interested musicians and the public at large, the Daly City Community Band will take its place as a definite asset to the community, an organization we can all enjoy. No group of this kind exists in the north county at the present time.

The Recreation Commission will meet at Daly City Civic Center first floor council chambers at 7:30 p.m.

Our nation honors all types of heroes, men and women with distinguished war records, brilliant scientists who discover the cures for dread diseases, men who allow themselves to be shot out into space and men and women who stand alone in defense of great personal principles. We gaze on them with adoration and bask in their reflected glory. They are courageous, hardworking and immensely visible.

There are many other heroic people we have never heard of and whose names would mean nothing to us should we be introduced. Silent and invisible men and women who wish to remain anonymous as they wage determined war against overwhelming problems.

A number of them are involved with the work of Friends Outside and it is through that organization that the public is beginning to become aware of the struggle toward a normal life that many families are engaged in day in and day out.

According to Friends Outside, any family that manages to hold together throughout the father's imprisonment and then close ranks with him following his release so that the family may become a stable and lawbidding segment of society is a family of unsung heroes.

IMPRISONMENT is not only a means of isolating lawbreakers from possible victims, it is also the end of many family units. To live each day under the weight of the knowledge that one's husband or father is in prison is such a handicap that it is a marvel that any family or marriage can survive the strain. While the prisoner is a part of a community the family is cut adrift in society and they live surrounded by the hostility of others and eaten from within by fear and uncertainties.

Children soon feel a burning resentment for a father they can talk about, boast about or even talk with in private conversation. Even young children soon come to understand that the cloud the family lives under is, in some way, caused by the absent father. It is fertile ground for hatred to flourish and for the perpetuation of the criminal pattern.

Many children do not visit their fathers in prison but even on visiting days what would they be able to say to a father who doesn't know any of their friends, who has never seen their school and who can't treat them to a candy bar or play a short game of catch with them? Biologically the prisoner may be a father but in actuality, while a prisoner, he is incapable of functioning as the head of a household. For many prisoners this is no tragedy for they have little sense of responsibility and any lingering feelings of involvement soon die a natural death. For other men, however, this can be the most painful side of their prison experience, the sheer impossibility of practicing any role of responsibility within the family is frustrated by far more than concrete walls and iron barred windows.

A MAN MAY JUSTLY deserve to be removed from society for a period of time, but does society want to bear the responsibility of criminalizing his offspring by shattering family units? The problems are agonizing for everyone from those intimately involved in crisis, to the criminologists, the sociologists, the educators and the private citizens who feel a pattern exists that must be modified if we are ever to reclaim any lives from the shadow of the sorid confines of the visiting room in state prisons.

The punishment of the man who made one mistake doesn't end with the completion of his sentence. His return to his home often reactivates the curiosity and hostility of the neighbors. Children, who have lived through one era of isolation and humiliation, may face a second such experience when their father reappears on the scene. Initially they may have been young enough to have been sheltered by concerned members of the family or friends but little children may grow into awkward and sensitive teenagers while a man serves his sentence and the hurt and embarrassment caused by his sudden reappearance may overshadow any feeling of thanksgiving and may give rise to bitterness and withdrawal.

NOT ONLY MUST a man be prepared to face a difficult readjustment period with his children, he must be ready, if need be, to face a bitter period of reconcilation with his wife. The removal of a husband from his home causes his wife to assume new roles and new duties. She is the final and only authority in matters of discipline and general conduct of the children. She is the breadwinner with the total responsibility for the family's financial integrity. Her conduct and schedule have been her own creations and she has been accountable to no helpmate for months or years. How she accepts the reintroduction of this masculine influence in the family will determine whether or not the unit and indeed the man can be salvaged.

Family problems are complex, neighborhood attitudes are painful to bear, work may be difficult to locate and still there is yet another cross on the shoulders of the ex-prisoner. His mentality has been institutionalized and his release from the routine he has depended upon to help maintain his mental stability causes waves of insecurity to wash over him. He feels insecure in his newly rewon freedom and he seems alienated from all those about him. Many men have to learn to forgive themselves before they can reassert themselves as the head of a household.

The ideas society hold concerning prisoners are undergoing re-evaluation on the private as well as on the professional level. What the final outcome of the current studies and "new thought" will be is still unclear but Friends Outside feels one thing is abundantly clear, an acceptable idea of how to establish a line of communication between the prisoner and his family is vital. When the cohesive element within families can be maintained and even murtured while the fathers are in prison Friends Outside feels it is helping the individual prisoners who are potentially the most likely to become self supporting members of society.

NEXT WEEK—The Friends Outside Philosophy.

THE ERNESTO MARCELLIS

Former Localites Wed Fifty Years

The Peninsula Social Club was the setting for the golden wedding anniversary party honoring Mr. and Mrs. Ernesto Marcelli of Los Altos, former South San Francisco residents.

Co-hosting the event were the couple's daughters and sons-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Leveroni of Los Altos and Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Sheehan of San Mateo.

Highlight of the evening was the singing of Irene Morcci of San Francisco, the couple's cousin, who is a member of the San Francisco Opera Company.

Guests included Mrs. Marcelli's sister, Mrs. Joseph Bonino of South San Francisco, and Mrs. Francisco Fiorentini of South San Francisco, her sister-in-law.

Still other guests were the couple's grandchildren, Laura Nanna of Santa Barbara; Judy Tuck of Redwood City; Jeanne, Joanne and Ben Leveroni of Los Altos and Dave and Diane Sheehan of San Mateo. Another grandchild, Mike Sheehan, was unable to attend since he is based with the U.S. Navy in San Diego.

Ernesto and Benizia Marcelli were married on July 22, 1922 in Redwood City. They are both natives of Massa Carrara, Italy.

Montara Trip For J-Teens

J-Teens in Pacifica will be going to Montara Beach August 25, from 4-9 p.m. for a Summer Celebration. This is going to be "the" beach trip of the summer. We are having a cookout with all the trimmings, a marshmallow roast with a somemores relay.

'Thing in the Park' in SSF

"Thing-in-the-Park," a South San Francisco Recreation Division popular traditional activity for the past several summers, will be held August 16 at Orange Memorial Park.

The days varied activities include: boys and girls all-star baseball and softball games, movies, an art display, tiny tot races and games, novelty races, an obstacle course, competitive games, and an apple-bobbing contest.

Several new and exciting events also are on the days events schedule and they include the 8 to 14-year-old clown contest and an old traditional event from European history, jousting.

Two of the most popular activities will surely be the now famous greased-pole climb and a watermelon eating contest.

All of these activities are free to the public and will start at 11:00 a.m. and run until about 3:00 p.m. Times for all events can be obtained from local playground Recreation Leaders.

All 13 of South San Francisco playgrounds will be participating in the day's festivities and therefore no staffing will be done except at Orange Memorial Park.

Public school holidays will be observed and there will be vacations at Christmas and Easter.

Upon enrollment, mothers will receive informational materials concerning the nursery plus health and emergency forms. These forms must be completed and returned to the YWCA office before the child is eligible to attend the nursery. These are essential safeguards for all children and parents in the program.

Millbrae Church Is Nuptial Site

The former Diana Marie Gomez and Larry Caporale were married at the Church of the Visitacion in San Francisco. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Gomez of Brisbane and the bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Josephine Caporale of San Francisco. The couple is living in Daly City after a honeymoon in Southern California.
(Staggs Studio)

A home in Belmont awaits Kenneth Bert Smith and his bride, the former Susan Diane Squires, who are honeymooning at Yosemite and Lake Tahoe after exchanging vows Saturday at 2 p.m. at the Millbrae Baptist Church.

Dr. Richard Cramer conducted the service for the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Squires and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace B. Smith. Both families reside in Millbrae.

The newlyweds are both graduates of Capuchino High School where she was a varsity cheerleader, class officer and member of the California Scholarship Federation. He also studied at the College of San Mateo where Susan will be enrolled in the fall. At CSM, Kenneth belonged to Alpha Gamma Sigma fraternity.

The bride asked her cousin, Sandra Meadows of San Mateo, to be her maid of honor. Jolene Bell and Patrice Michell, both of Millbrae, and Pamela Josserand of Foster City shared bridesmaid duties and flower girl duties were performed by Lori Puccinelli, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Puccinelli of San Bruno.

When the bride walked to the altar with her father, she was wearing a white gown of Chantilly lace and silk chiffon which had a high rise lace bodice with long fitted lace sleeves and a Victorian collar. Lace also bordered Susan's fully gathered chiffon skirt which had an attached sweep train.

The bride completed her look with a silk illusion veil secured by a matching headpiece. Baby white roses, stephanotis and baby's breath were arranged in her old fashioned bouquet.

Identical gowns were worn by each member of the bridal party. The aqua organza costumes were fashioned with V necklines framed by double ruffles, raised waists with satin belts and long sheer sleeves with double ruffles at the wrists.

Bouquets of yellow daisies, tropicana roses and baby's breath were carried by the honor and secondary attendants and a basket of the same flowers was carried by the flower girl.

Rec Bd. Says S.F. Reneged On Watershed

San Francisco has reneged on its promise to devise a plan for recreational use of its watershed property in San Mateo County, the County Parks and Recreation Commission contends.

James Knecht, of Redwood City, appeared before the commission Wednesdy to request that the board request a hearing concerning the matter.

"There have been many promises made to San Mateo relative to use of the watershed, particularly golf courses," Knecht said, "and I don't see any reason why this has to keep dragging on and on."

He elicited the support of Commission Chairman Herbert G. Petersen, who noted that San Francisco had asked the support of San Mateo County in successfully seeking the higher routing for Junipero Serra Freeway past the Crystal Springs Lakes, with the indication "they would go to bat for us in recreational use."

County Parks and Recreation Director John T. Brook Jr., commented that the only way San Francisco has fulfilled its commitment is by calling for bids for preparation of a master plan for watershed recreational use.

However, faced with a $30,000 to $50,000 price tag, the city now says it doesn't have the funds for the plan, Brook said.

He concurred with Petersen that the county should be "urging" San Francisco to keep promises made when it sought the Junipero Serra routing support.

The commission, sympathetic to Knecht's request for a hearing, decided that it first will ask a full status report on the situation from Brock at its September 13 meeting and then decide on a future course of action.

James Leonard, assistant to San Francisco Public Utilities Manager John Crowley, said today that on the basis of past experience and more pressing monetary prioritise, the city's water department is in no hurry to push for recreational development of its 23,000 acres of land in San Mateo County.

Tracing past history of the recreation use proposal, Leonard noted that a general development plan for 4000 acres was prepared more than a year ago by the firm of Wilsey and Ham. It called for development of golf, tennis, swimming and picnic areas.

Conservationists blasted the proposal and said a more definitive plan was needed. The water department subsequently requested $40,000 for such a plan.

That request has never been approved and still is in the office of Mayor Joseph Alioto.

"We have been informed that it is not one of the higher priority spending items the city has to consider," Leonard said.

Because of the concerted opposition to the original plan, the water department doesn't feel it is in a positon to "pound the table and demand money when it has other priority projects," he stated.

The water department is prepared to go ahead with recreational development if the planning mony is forthcoming, Leonard said. However, it is aware that it will be fought "every step of the way" unless the plan is restricted to non-intrusive projects such as hiking trails and bicycle paths, he added.

"We realize," Leonard stated, "that many San Mateo County residents oppose any development and fight any plan."

He noted that opponents have expressed concern that development will turn the watershed valley into a "basin of smog" from cars, parking lots and installation of utilities to serve recreational facilities.

Leonard reported 19,000 acres on the west of the valley are to be maintained as a permanent ecological preserve.

"It is a real live laboratory for school children," he said, and is used extensively on a permit basis for field trips.

E.P.A. Center Gets Grant

Congressman Paul N. McCloskey Jr. of Portola Valley today announced a grant to the Charles Drew Health Center in East Palo Alto from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) totalling approximately $2 million.

Dr. Eddie H. Harris, Charles Dew Health Center project director, stated the grant is for "comprehensive ambulatory health service including mental health, adult medicine, health education, nutrition and general outreach into the East Palo Alto community.

$1 Million Award To Atherton Wife

An Atherton mother of four children has been awarded a $1 million out-of-court settlement as the result of a plane crash four years ago.

Mrs. Ann Chew Melbye, 36, was crippled in the accident in July of 1968 when the light aircraft in which she was flying crashed in Colorado.

She won the settlement Wednesday just as the case was about to go to trial in Oakland.

The jury had already been selected when Superior Court Judge G. J. Goode approved the huge settlement, said to be one of the largest out-of-court agreements in the history of the state.

Mrs. Melbye, the wife of a Redwood City attorney, Richard Melbye, has been confined to a wheelchair since the accident. She suffered spinal injuries when the Cessna 206 crashed.

Defendants named in the case were:

William Owen, a Redwood City attorney associated with Melbye and the owner-pilot of the aircraft; Cessna Aircraft Corp., Wichita, Kan.; Continental Motors Corp., Muskegon, Mich., the engine designer; and, California Aviation Service, Inc., Oakland, which reportedly maintained the plane.

Mr. and Mrs. Melbye and Mr. and Mrs. Owen were aboard the plane when it had an engine failure during an attempted landing forced by bad weather.

All four of the people were hurt, Mrs. Melbye the most seriously.

The suit had asked for $2.5 million in damages, arguing that the failure occured because of an improper fuel system and faulty maintenance. It asserted that the plane's makers had experienced similar problems with the model and had not corrected the fault.

Mrs. Melbye, the daughter of Oakland internist Dr. William Chew, and her husband have four children, ages 6, 8, 10 and 12.

Pacifica Youth Succumbs

Ronald Foster, 18-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Foster of 207 Lauren Avenue, Pacitica, died Sunday at Mary's Help Hospital as a result of injuries suffered when a car he was riding in smashed into a tree in Pacifica Friday night.

Two other youths escaped injury in the wreck on Lakeside Avenue shortly after midnight.

Another passenger, Brad Elmore, 17, was reported in good condition following surgery for facial and head injuries.

Foster died in the hospital's intensive care ward at 7:40 p.m. His parents agreed to donate the young victim's kidneys for transplant.

The driver of a South San when his vehicle collided with a car on South Airport Boulevard about 10:45 p.m. last night.

Authorities at Peninsula Hospital said Jerry Allan Epstein, of 709 Thirty-first Avenue, San Mateo, suffered concussions in the accident.

A female passenger in the truck, Gladys B. Richardson, of Diamond Springs, and the driver and passenger of the other car escaped serious injury in the crash.

Thomas Nutting, founder of Nutting Nursery in South San Francisco, and his wife, Theresa, were treated and released at Mary's Help Hospital.

S.S.F. Swim Pool Rescue

An Air Force reservist lounging around tne swimming pool at South San Francisco's Holiday Inn was credited with saving the life of John W. Barrett, 23, of Essingto, Pa., August 1.

According to South San Francisco firemen, the reservist, William Lewis, of Long Beach, noticed that Barrett failed to surface after about a minute under water. He dived in, pulled Barrett up, and administered mouth to mouth resuscitation.

SSF Council Moves For Term Limitation

It is possible that future South San Francisco Councilmen will be able to serve only two consecutive terms.

The present council last week on a 4-1 vote took steps in this direction by an ordinance establishing two consecutive terms as a maximum.

"Here we (the present council) are legislating for future governments," said Ahern. "People have the right to choose. That's what the vote is all about."

Councilman Patrick Ahern lodged the negative vote.

Mayor Frank Mammini responded that "another council, if they so choose, can change it again. Eight years for anyone is more than enough. After that you become complacent and just drift."

Mammini noted that the president of the United States is limited to two terms, and that there are moves afoot to limit terms of other public officials, including the governor.

Councilman Gordon T. Boblitt said he strongly supported such an ordinance. He said "it makes the council more responsive to the public, because they have to go back to the people."

City Attorney John Noonan, explaining that the proposal is new for general low cities, said he would continue to check for any legal rulings that may forbid such an ordinance.

Boblitt said the proposal also would "break autocratic leadership."

Hardworking Athlete-scholar

When Phil Shinnick was a junior at Gonzaga Prep in Spokane, his classmates and the faculty knew him as a fine, hardworking athlete-scholar. But as Shinnick admits today, he knew only that he must search for the truth.

Now, at age 29, and after an odyssey in search of that truth which carried him through a spiritual hitchhiking tour of fasting and meditation in Europe; three isolated months in a cabin in Alaska; a world long jump record (27'-4", Modesto, 1963) while a member of the University of Washington track team; membership on the 1964 Olympic team (and as an alternate, '68), and a Ph.D. in higher education at Berkeley, he has, he feels, at least formed a philosophy of truth.

"I think that along that road (to truth), if you're really honest with yourself and willing to struggle through decisions that have implications on your life to make you change, and if you have the courage to do that, then what has to be done will become evident."

What has become evident to Shinnick, very simply, is that "athletes have become dehumanized." And if all goes well, he will have a chance, this fall, to put into practice what he has been theorizing as associate director of U.C. Berkeley's Institute for the Study of Sport and Society, the movement which started four years ago with a controversial paper-back book by Jack Scott attacking tyrannical coaches, charging society with the exploitation of athletes, and calling for sport as a vehicle of health and joy rather than as an object of organized voyeurism and competition for material profits.

Scott recently moved the Society from the Cal campus to Oberlin College, Ohio, which has made him athletic director with full authority to put his ideas of "human athletics" to practical use; and Shinnick is currently engaged in negotiations with Livingston College, an experimental school of Rutgers University, to implement a program with, "a radical approach to sports."

Located in New Brunswick, N.J., Livingston is instituted as a small campus with, says Shinnick, "a lot of political involvement, black and white radicals, and prominent psychologists."

He's now negotiating to see if the people there are really behind his ideals and are willing to make a commitment, although he says they, "sound solid, like they know what's happening."

And what will happen if such a program is implemented? Students will have much to say about how the program is operated. If they want a football team, for example, they can have one. And if they do, Shinnick will try to bring in a coach like Dave Meggysey, the dissident ex-St. Louis linebacker who quit the pros at the peak of his career because he was being "dehumanized." Games will be played for fun and for the physical benefits derived thereof, and above all, coaches will be teachers, not tyrants.

"When I was doing all of that meditating and traveling," says Shinnick, "I became aware that the myths of athletics weren't true, and that they're perpetuated to motivate people to do things that are basically antithetical to a humanistic philosophy.

"What we need in this country is a whole new philosophy of sports, although in the short run I'd be happy if pro athletes could own themselves, and collect gate receipts; if we could convince people that spectator sports are unhealthy for both spectators and participants — spectators because they're not helping their health by watching, and athletes because they must respond to the expectations of the spectators and in effect lose their own will. And if we could fight the people who exploit athletes in the traditional capitalistic way, by espousing a general philosophy defining physical activity as a getting away from the high achievement thing, where it can be fun. This can be done by attacking high achievers and showing them that they don't have it so good, after all, with all the pressure, the exploitation, drug usage, that whole scene."

In the meanwhile, Shinnick has been doing more than just philosophizing. For the past two years he has been an integral part of a movement to organize athletes into a union called United Amateur Athletes, for the purpose of taking over the governing of amateur athletes in the United States. Additionally, he and others are engaged in attempting to organize an Olympic demonstration against theVietnam bombing.

"Sure, Scott and I are idealists," says Shinnick, "but we also know the realities. We look for Utopia, but we're still willing to deal with short-run solutions to immediate problems. We work on the premise that objective, vigorous investigation and factual documentation is the best way to present the issues, and that's why the Institute has been as successful as it has.

"For example, it's a fact that the Olympic Committee made $250,000 from the gate receipts at the Olympic trials in Eugene, Ore., yet they refused to reimburse the expenses of the athletes.

"Now, that's a fact, and that's wrong, and it's exactly that type of thinking that we're fighting, and that we hope to eventually eliminate."

(TO BE CONCLUDED NEXT WEEK)

S.C. Athletic Schedules Are Complete

Four of Skyline College's intercollegiate athletic sports schedules — soccer and cross country in the fall and basketball and wrestling in the winter — now have been completed.

This coming year the Trojans will be facing one of the most interesting athletic seasons in the three year's of the college's athletic program.

Soccer under coach Norm Friedeberg will have a slate or sixteen contests, 13 of 'em in the league play. The locals open their season against their Alumni on September 7.

Bob Lualhati's cross country unit will have 11 meets with the initial gathering taking place against Alameda College in the Half Moon Bay Beach Run on September 22.

Moving into the winter sports scene Walt Rilliet's basketball team will not only be featured in the Camino Norte League, but will again participate in the Cabrillo College Tourney in Aptos (Dec. 14, 15, 16) and will host the 2nd annual Skyline College Classic on Dec. 28 and 29 with College of San Mateo, Santa Ana and Cuasta College rounding out the four-team affair.

Wrestling looks like its again on the upswing for the San Bruno based squad starting off their season of numerous dual and invitational meets against the Alumni on November 17 at 7 p.m.

Coach Les Allen also will have his grapplers hosting the Skyline Invitational on December 2.

Warriors to Hold Clinic

The Golden State Warriors Basketball Team will visit South San Francisco August 16, at South San Francisco High School Gym, 400 B Street, to present a free basketball clinic.

This summer the clinic, sponsored by the South San Francisco Recreation Division, will again be held at 7:30 p.m. in the evening so that fathers and mothers may also see the pros with their youngsters.

Coach Al Attles, and many members of last year's Golden State Warriors team, will be on hand to give instructions to the boys and girls attending. Free tickets will be awarded and basketball and Warriors T-shirts will also be given as prizes.

Families, boys and girls, teen-agers are all invited to attend, watch and talk with the professional basketball players.

Theison Glass in Playoffs In Pacifica Old Pro Loop

Theison Glass made it into the Old Pro play-offs, as they edged past the 2901 Club, 7-6, in extra innings in the Old Pro Softball League in Pacifica.

Carl Rose and Ray Del Peepo provided the "key" base hits for the margin of victory for the Theison ball club. Justin Brinks had three hits in four trips to plate for the 2901 Club.

The Budmen clinched second spot in the Old Pro League as they ripped Lamco Saints, 13-7. The Buomen were paced by Ray Bracco who went 4 for 4 and Dave Stevens went "three for four" in the victory.

Carsen English and Rick McRichie both hits "four for four" and scored 8 runs. Doug White, Doug Newbery, and Bob Greyson added 3 hits apiece in the winning effort. Hitting for Manor Barber were Frank DeCosta and Denny Coen, going "four for four" and "three for four" respectively.

2901 came out on top of a great pitching duel in which each pitcher allowed the opposing team only six hits. Unfortunately for Ski & Dive, four of the hits came in the second inning when 2901 scored all 3 of their runs. Jerry Gordon came up with the big hit of the night with the games only homerun. 2901's short stop L. Perna robbed Ski & Dive of several hits as he turned out an excellent performance. This game clinches 1st place for the 2901 Club.

Chuck Jacobson pounded out 3 base hits as Ray's No-Stars made it into the play-off's by nipping the once mighty Dolphin Real Estate 6-3 in the Rookie League. John LeCount had 3 hits in the losing effort for the Real Estate Ball Club.

A&W took second place, as they picked up a forfeit.

The Daly City Recreation Department's annual Horseshoe Pitching Tournament will be August 19 at Westlake Park.

Championship Action On the Trampoline

Michiko Dawkins, 10, of San Bruno, will be one of the 650 young athletes representing the best from all parts of the United States, at the sixth annual National AAU Junior Olympic Championships in Spokane, Wash., August 15-17.

Miss Dawkins won the honor to compete at Spokane by capturing first place in the trampoline at the Region XIII Championships (covering the states of California and part of Nevada).

To qualify for the Regionals, she won the Pacific Association AAU Junior Olympic crown earlier this summer.

The National Championships represent the climax of activity throughout the year among millions of youngsters aged 6-18 in thirteen (13) Junior Olympic sports. The Spokane event will feature the final competition in six (6) of these sports: track and field, swimming, diving, judo, gymnastics and trampoline.

Sponsor of the Junior Olympic program, the Chevrolet Motor Division, provides funding for the event, including the chartering of planes from New York, Chicago, Atlanta, Kansas City, Dallas, Denver, San Francisco and Hawaii to bring the competitors, their coaches and chaperones to the picturesque Inland Empire city. Chevrolet's involvement also covers the housing and feeding if the participants from their arrival on August 14 through their departure on August 18.

Dorms on the Gonzaga University campus will house the athletes, who will take their meals at its Student Union Building. Gonzaga's Kennedy Pavillion, a modern athletic facility, will also be the site of the diving, gymnastics and trampoline competition.

Nearby Witter Pool, a 50-meter park facility, will host the swimming competition, while Gonzaga Prep School gym hosts the judokais in their competition.

Both the impressive Opening and Closing Ceremonies of the Junior Olympics as well as the two evenings of track and field competition will be staged at the Spokane Falls Community College stadium, set amid high evergreen trees at the foot of Spokane's impressive mountain surroundings. The synthetic track itself is one of the fastest surfaces in the state and has witnessed a number of city and state records in recent years.

The list of past Junior Olympians who have gone on to national prominence include:

Rafer Johnson, gold medal winner in the decathlon at the 1960 Olympic Games in Rome; John Pennel, first man to pole vault 17 feet; Don Schollander, winner of six gold medals in 1964 Olympic swimming competition; Judi Ford Johnson, trampoline champion who became Miss America in 1969; and swimmer Mark Spitz, the recipient of the 1971 James E. Sullivan Memorial Award as the nation's outstanding amateur athlete.

Roundup of Daly City Playgrounds

Playgrounds in Daly City are quite active and will continue to be open through Aug. 23. The Daly City Recreation Department will host an end-of-the-summer event on Thursday, Aug. 24 at Westlake Park.

A. Lincoln — Steve Roche, Mike Rasche, Kathy Albrecht.

The 1972 High sticking broom hockey leagues came to a half with the Blackhawks capturing the championship.

They were led by Celestus Thorne, who set a league record of 16 goals, and Dietz Balagot whose great defense work helped trounce all the opponents. The "All League" team was named and it was headed by Celestus Thorne at right wing. The left wing was Mike Williams of the Golden Seals.

Mike was the league's second leading scorer. The defensemen were Dietz Balagot of the Blackhawks and Leonard Hogue of the Flyers. Rounding out the "All League" team was goalie Dave Moorman of the Bruins.

The "All League" team met the Westmoor Park All Stars for the Sampson-McDonald Perpetual Trophy. Tony Dekelaita exhibiting a vicious slap shot scored all four Westmoor goals in leading his team to a 4-2 win. All leaguers Dietz Balagot and Leonard Hogus had their hands full in trying to contain Dekelaita. Keith Prater, Doug Dennis, Rick Baldocchi, and Celestus Thorne played well for Abe Lincoln. The Abe Lincolners left Westmoor Park without the trophy but everyone knows that Abe Lincoln will capture the trophy once Dekelaita is gone. The capacity crowd left in amazement as Lincoln's famed defense was finally cracked.

Abe Lincoln is anxiously waiting for the results of the Regional Frisbee Tourney as Rori Silva, Abe Lincoln's City Champ, was competing in the tourney. The oddsmakers have Rori as a 5-2 favorite to capture the crown.

Colma School — John Jarvis

Except for two tired leaders, everyone made the hike easily. Upon arrival, the children got to witness how the Department of Fish and Game plant the lake with fish.

The fishing was good but the lines were tangled. Between volunteer parents and leaders most of the lines were in the water most of the time. Happy faces were worn by all as everyone at least got a nibble; except for the frustrated fisherwoman Pat Vince, Recration Leader at Little Jeff.

Crocker; Pat Mannina

Crocker School is taking a lot of pride by challenging Frankfort Park to a "day of Events". Events will include a ping-pong tourney, carroms contest, strike-out contest, one on one basketball tourney, all topped off by a grudge football game.

One popular event which remains a biggie here at Crocker is tennis ball baseball. The participants are such superstars as Franklin Shelton, Keith Shelton and Wesley Arcanaux. Also appearing are Derrick Woodlock and Andre Arcenaux. Mike Sims, Patrick Morales, and Gabriel Corana play New York, Boston, as well as the infield. Leon Sen Swapy appeared as Lawrence Welk while Steven Arcenaux and Daman Bobo had quick recognition as Laurel & Hardy.

Daniel Webster: Tom Nuris

This week at Daniel Webster saw many exciting moments highlighted with an action packed baseball game with F.D. Roosevelt School. Webster's "Warriors" took an early lead of 1-0 in the first inning which was later increased to 3-0. Finally in the last inning of official play, F.D.R. was allowed to score a baserunner, thus making the final tally 3-1. Webster's victory can be attributed to heads up baserunning as well as sterling defense. To elaborate further on the win over F.D.R. would simply tip off future opponents — suffice it to say "Look Out."

Along with our regaular tournament of chess, carroms, and ping-pong, plans are being made for a possible coaster-soapbox building contest and for the literary minded, a song lyric writing contest. Rules and signups for both these attractions are presently being taken at the playground.

Frankfort Park: John Relic

On Friday, a basketball one-on-one tournament was held at Frankfort Park.

The tournament was double elimination and the divisions included a bracket for boys 11 and under and another bracket for boys 12-14. Winners were: 11 and under — 1st Jim Pagan, 2nd Robert Delaney, 3rd — Anthony Ford. In the 12-14 years division — 1st — John Wallace; 2nd — Carlos Tate; 3rd — Robert Barnes.

F. D. Roosevelt: Ed Darnell and Dean Chalios

Recently at F.D.R., we held our Daly City 250 Bike Race. The race was run in a number of heats and there were many close calls around the demanding course. Winner in the Junior Division was Tim McCollough as he beat his competition, Sam Hernandez by ½ a lap.

In the "B" Class Junior Division, Jim Ramsey and Tony Aviles were a close 1 and 2. The Girls Division saw competition in the Hernandez family with Julie beating her sister Joanne.

The upset of the day came in the Senior Division with Larry Chacone on a Stingray beating Chico Lewis on a ten speed by a mile.

Other activities at F.D.R. include a roller skating trip to the Rolladium in San Mateo on the 18th of August.

Jefferson Elementary: Pat Vince

Last week's fishing trip to Lake Merced proved to be a great success. Kenny Kinard and Janice and Michael McDonald were the first three hikers to submit themselves to "fog exhaustion"!

Without the aid of Roger Goodman, these three hikers would still be dragging their feet home. Lisa Goodman and Julie Dentoni proved to be the fastest hikers for they were the first to reach the destination while Terry Dentoni was the last to arrive. Mark Goodman exhibited much style and talent as he was the only one to nab a rainbow trout.

Leslie McDonald was an expert at hooking fish. However, her ability to reel the line in and actually overpower the fish left much to be desired for these squirmy creatures always outsmarted her.

Her brother, Michael, was truly a coordinated fisherman for he tangled every line he came in conrtact with in his attempts to cast his line. He too managed to let a few fish excape from his superbly camouflaged hooks.

Finally, but not least Glenn Kinard, our expert fisherman from Angel Island, went home empty handed. For some strange reason, the fish just weren't biting his lines. Could have been the type of bait, Glenn!

Our softball team has now played three games and to everyone's dismay, they haven't been the victors once. Talent and skill are present but somehow the team, Clay Younger, Hike Hara, Robby Romo, Mike and Donald Simon, and Mike, Eddy, and Paul Boyd, can't muster up enough energy to overpower the other teams. Presently, our only hope is that Little Jeff will come through with at least one victory before the summer ends!

Junipero erra: William Schultz

In checkers this week, Greg Griffin has shown his complete mastery of the game by winning 23 games and winning the tournament's first prize, and even winnig the recreation leader in one game. Second place goes to Terje Rogne and third is tied between ammy Domingo and Wilke See-Tho.

The usual crowd was in attendance this week including the Brothers Loeloff Bob (and Bunt) Gonzalies B. J. and Greg) and Paul and Diuane Jolgunos; all involved in such activities as basketball, football, softball, fetherball, checkers, chess, (including of course the most popular game, annoy-the-director).

Special Determination award of the week goes to Jennie Escoboza, the only girl on the playground who had resolved to play football even though she didn't quite have a complete knowledge of the rules.

H. P Brown: Joe Boboschi

The upcoming strike out tournament has attracted a lot of talent at M. P. Brown. The team of Rich Baxley and John Rodriguez seems a likely choice to win the grammar school division. However, stiff competition will be provided by Randy Wyatt, Steve Sommers and Sean Clar. In the high school division, the team of Jim Espina and Rick Wyatt appears to be a strong contender. Jeff Bipes, Steve Haught, Gregg Georgakas, Kirk Autsen and Gary McLane will make up the rest of the competition for the high school crown.

There will be a barbecue on Friday. Bring your choice of foods. Following the barbecue, a kickball game will be played. Tell your friends to come out for a day of food and fun.

Northridge: Steve Becker

Last week at Northridge Park, the activities were highlighted by spirited basketball games, brain-racking chess matches, and aggressive football contests, and the regular strike out competition.

We had our first full court basketball game Wednesday afternoon which saw Richer Rogers lead the victors' squad with 12 points. The Pass Pickers overcame a tough battle from the Karrem's Cagers to decide the contest 28-22. Martin Sweet, Wayne Wynn, and Terry Warren also scored well besides putting the clamps on while playing defense. For the losers, Timmy Cronin did most of the scoring and dribbling, Michael Dunevent the hacking, and Todd Warren the rebounding.

On the chess table, Martin Sweet and the Director have daily replayed the moves of the "Fish" Fischer and "Boring" Spassky in order to gain a fuller understanding of the complicated game. Greg Schori, potentially powerful, is learning rapidly and may eventually win a game.

My compliments are extended to Brenda and Latrica Nash for their pastries from the kitchen, and also to Terry Warren for his home made chicken.

Our Lady of Mercy: Kathy Curry

This Thursday was a day for softball at O.L.M. Ted Scott's "Terrors" defeated Bill Kennedy's "Bombers" 16-15. Bill Cremen hit a terrific triple but was tagged out by Bill Kennedy when overrunning third.

The "Choir Boys" Matt and John Sullivan made it back from the river to join in the fun. John hit a single and one three errors brought in four runs. The Nagy brothers, Bob and John, and the Diggins brothers, Jim and Dan, made an overwhelming amount of hits along with the women's libbers Corey Price, and Cristofani, Eileen and Mary Diggins, Alana Brigid and Michelle Modena, and Betty Cremen. Paul Tonelli ended the game when tagged out at first by Michelle Modena.

Palisades: Rick Ferratto

The past week at Palisades Park would fittingly be called "Sand Castle" week. There were many excellent creations not all of them castles. Kenju and Anson Snow constructed an amazing replica of a football stadium. Martin and Alfonso Zelaya along with Mike Amicarelli and Gael Cunnigham showed a talent for building tunnels several people showed a talent for destroying them). One huge construction built mainly by Kelly Thompson and Toni Markoff featured several small castles connected by ramps and tunnels and was highlighted with flowers.

The coming week will see the beginning of the carroms tournament that will decide the champions of the different divisions. There will also be a barbecue on Wednesday. Bring the food of your choice.

The following item is only mentioned out of fairness. Chjristina Amicarelli (age 6) defeated the recreation leader in a game of hunch. Twice!!

Happy Birthday to Mike Amicarelli!

Panorama: Mike Macia

The winner of the scavenger hunt last week at Panorama School was Dean Diliovanni and in second place was the team of Tanya and onlya Kriedan.

Baseball is still being played every day at Panorama. Dave Lopez, Bill Sandoval and Jeff Collett are all hitting extremely well. The girls are also doing well, Nina McCloud is one of the most improved girls on the girls softball team.

Vista Grande School: R.E. Rossi

What many expected to be the game of the century turned out to be the travesty of the week as the Vista Grande over the hill gang rode over the hapless Little Jeff Hawks 21-6. Despite the absence of veteran slugger and team captain Robert Ferrari, such notables as Tom Ferrari, John Wetherbee, Fran Ruiz, Ron Tomasello were able to pick up the slack and maintain their ranking as number 1 ballclub in upper Daly City.

From the opening pitch, it was obvious that Little Jeff was fighting a losing cause. As Vista Srande came to bat in the top of the firt inning lead off hitter Keith Jacobs drilled the first pitch into the left centerfield stands only to be followed by Rick, the Spider, Perez's monumental homerun to straight away centerfield. Two ominous signs for Little Jeff and leaving their defenses floundering with cries throughout the stadium begging for "no more".

All in all, it was chaos for Little Jeff as opposed to a well organized highly efficient attack from Vista Grande, including an inspired team mascot and bat boy Michael Eugene Washington.

Well, it's official now, ladies and gentlemen, when the name Vista Grande comes into your mind, it will always remind you

Westlake School: Nancy zeichelberger

Westlake School had an exciting week. First off, a mummy race was held. This event turned out to be a lot of fun for the kids wrapping up their soon becoming mummies. Some had difficulty with their tearing tissue paper which eventually eliminated them from the race. The first mummy to be finished was Brenda Gilberman; Nancy Ginesi was able to wrap her mummy, Susan Sylvester fast enough to obtaiun 2nd place. Other mummy attempters were Denise and Karen Reyunolds and Dorene Sylvester.

Potato sack races were also a part of the week. Kids were continually hopping with a few falls (otherwise known as rest time). However, the champ Robbie Masceroni was able to remain on his feet whereby winning each race he entered. Nancy Ginesi and Denise Reynolds proved also to be good as they tied for second place. Other contestants who showed great hopping ability were Susan Sylvester, Tony and John Hermes, Brenda Silverman, Dorene Sylvester, Karen Reynolds, Tricia, Joey and Teddy.

A carroms contest was again held last week. This time Laura MacDougal became "First place champ."

Another first place champ this past week was Joanne Maszeroni who jumped 172 times consecutively in the jump rope contest.

For the first time a licorice eating contest was held. Girls and boys alike, age 11 and under participated. There were two age divisions, 6-8 years and 9-11 years. In the 6-8 years Monica Hermes age 6 won enjoying every bite!

In the 9-11 years, Robbie Masceroni was the first to finish. Since this contest proved to be a success, another contest was held at the end of the week. Again there were two age divisions, 8-11 and 11-16. In the 8-11 division, Joanne Masceroni took First and in the second division, 11-16 years, Paul Giannini beat out Mike Kelly and Doug Clapper for the first place title.

High School Cage League Nears End

The Daly City Recreation Department High School Basketball heads into the final two rounds of play with the Broncos maintaining a one-half game lead over the Hotshots.

The Broncos stopped the Hotshots unbeaten streak by thrashing them 51-30. Ed Silicani banged in 16 points to lead the Broncos in scoring. Silicani was aided by the play of Elmer Love and Gregg Georgakas who scored 11 and 9 points respectively. The Hotshots were led in scoring by Dave Fritz who dumped in 9 points. Earlier in the week, the Broncos destroyed the Midgets 85-48. Elmer Love with 25 points and Ed Silicani with 16 points were top scorers for the Broncos. Ted Scott also played an outstanding game for the High Flying Broncos.

The Pacers picked up their second win of the year by upsetting the Vistasades by a score of 48-43. Rich Counts' scoring and rebounding once again was the key factor in the Pacers' victory. The Serramonte Sophomore scored 13 points and pulled down 17 rebounds. Ron Giddings also damaged the Vistasades' hopes for victory with 12 points. Paul Nelson scored 18 points for the Vistasades.

The Vistasades bounced back from their defeat at the hands of the Pacers to upend the Midgets 50-42. Paul Nelson had his finest night of the season by scoring 22 points to lead the Vistasades to victory. Rich De La Cruz and Mike Hurley also played a fine game for the Vistasades. "Big" Terry Mahoney once again led the Midgets in scoring with 16 points. Steve Walker also played well for the Midgets.

'The Backbone of Spirit'

By GLORIA HYLAND
Jefferson High School

With the fall season not too far off and thoughts of football games, rallies, Jeff's "swinging" Marching Band, the sound of cheering voices in our minds, I can't help but think of the Cheer Leaders and Pep Girls who are the "backbone" of all the spirit which radiates at Jefferson High School.

These exuberant students have been spending their "Summer Vacation," practicing every Tuesday and Thursday evenings from 7-9, on their cheers, routines, moves and formations.

They will be leaving in August for the National Cheerleading Association Camp, at Santa Cruz, where they will get further training along with other students from schools all over California. At the end of the training period, the girls compete against each school of trainees, which no doubt, is a contest of heated competition and one of the highlights of this Workshop.

The Pep Staff is a beautiful mixture of nationalities, and consists of the varsity cheerleaders Alex Senica, Renee Jefferson, Diane Harrison, Janice Williams and Patti Spinetti. The Pep Girls are: Grace Celestino, Linda Perez, Sue Moret, Teresa Fong and Linda Sam. The third group of girls are the Junior Varsity Cheerleaders, namely, Rosanna Garron, Denise Miller and Terry Jackson.

Not only do these peppy students keep Spirits high, they are one of the Fund Raising groups on the campus, who have to raise their own money to pay for their uniforms, sweaters and any equipment and publicity needed, by selling stationery, buttons with the school insignia on them, candy and soft drinks at the games, and will be making plans to sponsor a Pep Staff Dance in September, on the Jefferson High School Campus.

Without these lovely, spirited young ladies and one young gentleman, who take their school spirit seriously and strive for perfection, Jefferson High just wouldn't be the same.

So — If you are ever approached, "fellow-Daly City Resident", by a Pep Staff Member of Jefferson High School to give toward any of their Fund Raising Drivs, you can be sure it will be going toward a good Cause.

Tigets Claw To Victory Over Scots

In the Boys Sixth Grade Late Summer, sponsored by the Daly City Recreation Division, the OLPH Tigers clawed out a tough 4-3 victory over the St. Andrew's Scots. OLPH's Dana Ynostroza pitched an excellent game and led the Tigers to their second victory after a stormy first inning where the Scots scored 3 runs.

Val Gonzales drove a single through the infield that plated the tie breaking run gave the victory to the Tigers the SAL Colonels behind the excellent pitching of Steve Sattler and the hitting of Van Kesterner who went 2 for 3 edged the PAL Colts 6 to 5. The CAL Colonial Bugs crawled all over the PAL Cubs and defeated them 10-3.

Randy Givens came up twice with the bases loaded and cleared the bases both times with timely triples and ended the game with 6 RBI's.

Besides pitching a good game, Robert Avila singled twice drove in one run and scored another to keep the Bugs undefeated. St. Andrews Scots downed the PAL Cubs 8 to 1. Dennis Watkins went 3 for 3 with 2 triples and a single to lead the Scots hitting attack. D. Gordon of the PAL Cubs went 3 for 4 to keep the Cubs in the ball game.

ARMOR COURSE

FT. KNOX, Ky. — Army Private Dwight B. Warner, 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard A. Warner, 1499 Parrott Drive, San Mateo, recently completed eight weeks of basic training at the U.S. Army Training Center, Armor, Ft. Knox, Ky.

Playoff Spots Decided in D.C. League

The Daly City Recreation Department High School Slow Pitch League moves into the final week of play with all four playoff spots decided. The Swingin' A's, Seals, Hobo's, and Regal Selects all have clinched playoff spots and will begin playoff action on August 21, at Colma School Field and Ben Franklin School Field.

In last week's action the Regal Selects defeated the Vandals, 5-1, the Colts 45's knocked off the 800's 10-9 and the Hobo's destroyed the Cubs, 25-5, and the Seals won by forfeit over Thomas Edison.

The Regal Selects used the outstanding fielding of Bruce Olmanson plus the three run homer of Gary Gfroerer to defeat the Vandals. Olmanson continually stopped Vandal rallies with his outstanding fielding from his shortstop position. Gfroerer hit his homerun in the first inning and that was all the offense the Selects needed to pick up their fifth win of the year.

The Hobo's remained tied for second place with their victory over the Cubs. Gregg Georgakas' two homeruns and six rbi's led the Hobo's to this easy victory. Ernie Garcia sparkled on defense for the Hobo's.

The Colt 45's victory over the Old English 800's knocked the 800's out of any playoff contention. Pat Twomey and Dennis Rosselli led the 45's to this upset victory.

In the final game of the week the Seals remained in a three way tie for second place by picking up a forfeit win over Thomas Edison.

Gun Arrest In Pacifica

A 37-year-old San Jose man was arrested by Pacifica police Thursday and charged with possession of a concealed weapon.

Booked at 5 a.m. was Richard B. Allen, who police arrested in his car at Linda Mar Boulevard and Cabrillo Highway. Police said he had a revolver.

According to police reports, a call had been received from Palo Alto police notifying Pacifica units to be on the alert for Allen.

Police said Allen was apparently upset about a marital problem and was on his way to see his wife's alleged boyfriend.

Hunch League Signups Planned

The Daly City Recreation Division is now taking sign ups for the 1972 Fall Adult 3-Man Hunch League.

The league will feature two divisions: Open division and under 6-foot division.

League play is scheduled to begin on Monday, September 25 with all games played on Monday nights in the War Memorial Community Center Gymnasium. All teams interested in participating in this program must submit a complete team roster along with a $10 team entry fee before September 15.

Slow Pitch Play Planned

The Parks, Beaches & Recreation Department in Pacifica will be sponsoring a Fall Men's Slow-Pitch Softball League.

The league will be played on either Saturdays or Sundays, beginning the weekend of August 20, at Fairmont West Park and Sharp Park School.

Deadline for signing up a ball club will be August 16 before 9 p.m.

Pacifica Gets Study Grant

A $20,288 traffic safety grant for the city of Pacifica was approved Wednesday in Sacramento by the State Office of Traffic Safety.

According to OTS Director Lloyd Turner, the money will be used to conduct an analysis of city streets and then develop uniform standards for them.

The project is designed to overcome difficulties that date back to 1957 when nine coastal villages incorporated to form Pacifica. Each had developed along individual lines and, consequently, the city inherited a variety of street standards.

The grant approved today is the sixth awarded to Pacifica by the OTS. It will be used for:

—Development of typical roadway sections.

—Preliminary geometric layouts and street standards to meet unique local conditions and topography.

—Recommendations for solving the design and safety problems associated with older and low volume roadways.

—Development of data to provide the basis for proceeding with final detailed design engineering, cost estimates, and financing of selected street improvement.

The project director will be Dwight F. French, city director of public works.

Upon completion, it will become an integral part of the statewide program to reduce deaths, injuries, and property damage resulting from traffic collisions.

The Pacifica project was made possible through coordination between OTS and the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

Man Hurt in Airport Fall

Paul E. Mach, 28, of Baltimore, was seriously injured August 1 when he dropped to the ground level from the second floor observation deck at San Francisco International Airport.

A witness told airport authorities that Mach was on "the wrong side of the protective railing," and that a passerby said:

"Hey buddy, you'd better get back here."

At that point, the witness said, Mach dropped. He was admitted to Peninsula Hospital with multiple fractures of the spine and left leg, and is reportedly recovering satisfactorily today.

Dancing Five Nights A Week At Nick's Acres

"A restaurant is only as successful as the people who run it," and a prime example of this is dynamic Nick Gust, an unusual man who has long been a restaurateur of the finest order. Nick owns and operates three very successful oceanside restaurants at Rockaway Beach, Pacifica, and is assisted with professional friendliness by his wife, Lorraine, and son, Chuck. The Papagayo Room, with the accent on Mexican food and colorful "south of the border" atmosphere, is staffed by a team of experts. The menu offers many intriguing versions of enchiladas, tamales, tostadas, tacos, chiles rellenos, chile con carne, and other native specialties . . . Located upstairs is The Moonraker, an elegant restaurant which affords a sweeping view of the Pacific Ocean from every table while diners feast on unusual Continental dishes. An added attraction is the organ music of Don Kelly, whose extensive repertoire is open to your request challenge. . . . Across the street is Nick's Restaurant and Lounge, where the menu is large and varied, and includes breakfast, lunch and dinner favorites. There is also a gratifying array of appetizers, salads, soups, and desserts. For the active and merry makers, there is dancing five nights a week, spotlighting the Steve Romano Combo.

REGULAR FEATURE — Entertainment by the Tom Francis Duo will be featured in the cocktail lounge of The Fisherman restaurant when it opens in Burlingame Friday, August 18. Tom Francis is a singer-guitarist with a genius for communicating musically. Don Haas, a well-known pianist, organist, arranger and composer, has worked with Tom Jones, Englebert Humperdink, Mel Torme, Jack Jones and Judy Garland. The Fisherman will offer fresh seafood from the four corners of the world and authentically-prepared Italian pastas and other specialties, including Cioppino Sicilian-style.

Treats Of The Sea For Vince's Customers

"Treats of the Sea" is just one of the specialties at Vince's Italian and Sea Food Restaurant. The various fish are excellent however prepared — baked, poached, fried, broiled or creamed, and there are many entrees to tempt you. As for Italian fare, the menu suggests numerous favorites, such as Baked Lasagne, Veal Scaloppini, Chicken Cacciatore and Veal Parmigiana, as well as a variety of pastes. Vince's puts up orders to go, too. So give this some thought when planning your next rush meal. . . . This is the busiest time of the year for Park Avenue Tours. It seems everyone is heading for Lake Tahoe territory, and the easiest way (and, cheapest, we might add) to go is through one of Park Avenue Tours' offices, with four locations to serve you. Also available are package trips to Reno. Act now and enjoy "Fun the Nevada Way." . . . Bickford's Original Pancakes & Family Fare affords family dining in a relaxed, pleasant atmosphere. Only the best ingredients go into the making of their food, which includes a variety of pancakes, omelettes, sandwiches, salads, desserts, and many side orders. Entrees have been carefully chosen and portions are heaping. Many of the menu items are available for take out service, among which is Bickford's famous chicken (Lunch Box, Jumbo Box, Family Bucket, and Jumbo Bucket).

Enrico Romano Pizza Expert

'The King of Pizzas" is none other than Enrico Romano, owner and operator of Romano's Italian restaurant, Rockaway Beach Pacifica. For years, this singular man has been offering to the public pizzas (small, medium, large) which are unsurpassed in ingredients. It has always been Enrico's policy to heap each pizza with a mountain of mouth-watering delicacies, and it has been this policy which has brought back the same customers time and time again . . . Art Davis, executive chef at the Exposition Fish Grotto, Fisherman's Wharf, truly deserves his reputation as a culinary artist. Art has won countless awards for his cooking genius, and he's known throughout the country for an array of crab dishes. The menu is extensive and features most of Chef Davis' prize-winning recipes. . . . The Iron Horse restaurant on Maiden Lane is ideally located for business organizations who regularly hold their meetings in the fine banquet rooms here. For those who enjoy dining out and getting value received, the Iron Horse, with all its elegance, is the place to go . . . Becky, a voluptuous lady who does the Monday night "Fashions for Fun" at the Rodeway Inn, can now be viewed another day of the week. Becky and her show are also a big attraction during the Friday luncheon hour in the Encore Room.

Jovanelo's Awaits Your Visit

Jovanelo's, located in San Francisco's financial district, is a popular gathering spot for large parties and business functions. Owners Joe Piccinini, Nello Piccinini and Giovanni Costabile are most hospitable, and offer a menu which includes a splendid assortment of Italian foods, prepared Tuscany style. State Lotteries Have Long and Varied History

By TOM POWELL

In 1612, the Virginia Company needed money to finance the Jamestown colony. So they held a lottery.

Today, a growing number of Californians are saying that a lottery would be a good way to pay for some necessary projects that the current budget doesn't provide. Like the purchase of lands for open space or the development of environmental research. Or earthquake-proofing of schools.

Lotteries, they say, would be a voluntary form of taxation that would place no more pressure on a taxpayer already gasping for relief.

What is a lottery? Where did it come from?

The original lotteries can be traced back to earliest recorded history. The Old Testament makes reference to drawing of "lots" for the division of land. By the 1600's, lotteries had spread from Central Europe to England and the United States and as of 1972, more than 61 foreign nations operated them.

In this country lotteries flourished during the 1700's and 1800's and became a major source of revenue for religious sects, schools and government. However, by the 1850's, lotteries had fallen into disfavor for two reasons. Systems of taxation were becoming more refined and there was less need to rely on a voluntary revenue source. Also, corruption became so prevalent in most public and private lottery schemes that most states passed laws against them. By 1862, only Missouri, Delaware and Kentucky permitted them.

There was a mild revival after the Civil War with even California temporarily repealing its laws to allow the Mercantile Library of San Francisco to hold a lottery. However, public opposition grew and Congress moved to discourage the lotteries. By 1893, the last lottery — in Louisiana —folded.

Then, after 70 years of dormancy, lotteries were revived again by New Hampshire in 1963. New York followed in 1967 and New Jersey in 1970. Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and Connecticut authorized lotteries in 1971.

In 1964, an attempt was made by initiative (Proposition 16) to allow the "American Sweepstakes Corporation" to operate a lottery. The corporation proposed taking 26 cents off the top of every $2 ticket with the remainder being allocated 74 per cent for education and 26 per cent for prizes and administraton. Proposition 16 was defeated by more than two to one.

The New Hampshire and New York experiments brought in a reasonable amount of revenue, but their ticket prices were too high ($5 in New Hampshire and $1 in New York) and the drawings were held too infrequently (annually in New Hampshire and monthly in New York.)

Before starting its lottery program in 1971, New Jersey conducted a comprehensive marketing survey. As a result, that state established a 50-cent ticket price and weekly drawings. In addition, New Jersey computerized the lottery by recording all tickets sold and by developing automatic dispensing machines.

New Jersey officials estimated first-year gross sales of about $30 million. To their surprise, sales of six months were $72.7 million and annual sales exceeded $146 million. Net state revenues were more than $67 million.

The California Assembly Committee on Governmental Organization recently did a study of these eastern programs. Unofficially, the committee said that, if California were to adopt the New Jersey system, "maximum potential gross sales might be as high as $300 million, of which about $135 million would be net state revenue."

However, the committee notes that without a market survey, it has no way of knowing whether the participation rate would be similar.

There were two bills before the Legislature this year that sought establishment of a lottery through Constitutional amendment.

The first, jointly sponsored by Senator Mervyn Dymally and Assemblyman Leon Ralph (both of Southern California) would spend the revenues on education.

The second, sponsored by Assemblyman Dixon Arnett of San Mateo County, would spend the funds on acquisition of open-space lands, including portions of the California coastline, private lands around San Francisco Bay, private lands around the California portion of Lake Tahoe and others. It would also pay for development of research and demonstration projects in pollution, rapid transit, sewage disposal, and other environmental projects. Finally it would provide the funding of onsite low-income and middle-income housing.

"The bills are now resting in limbo," says Assemblyman Arnett. "Ralph's bill got to the Assembly floor a couple of months ago but was defeated after heavy debate. It was five or six votes short.

"It was put up for reconsideration but was defeated again by about the same margin. So at this point, the ballgame is up for this year."

Arnett said that when the matter is brought up again next session, he and the others may get together on a single bill.

"It will be a question of new faces in Sacramento," he continued. "It's a matter of whether we can get some new votes.

"It took 13 sessions in the New Jersey Legislature, before they got their bill through. That's the problem —convincing enough legislators.

"Seventy per cent of the people want some sort of lottery," he said. "But the opposition is coming from a strange coalition — church people and lobbyists from Nevada.

"Many of the legislators are concerned with the so-called moral issues. The people of the state aren't but the legislature feels it strongly and it takes time for them to change.

"As for the Las Vegas lobbyists," he said, "they don't count for a hell of a lot."

Which bill has a better chance of getting through — the one to benefit education or the one to help the environment?

"The education bill," Arnett frankly admits. "The whole environmental thing is controversial. There are those who believe that we don't need more open space. And low income housing is very controversial."

He said that state government involvement in housing would be a "first" and he believed that the Legislature would rather leave that to federal and local governments.

Asked if the presence of nearby Nevada casinos would have a hampering effect on a California lottery (that New Jersey doesn't have to contend with), Arnett said the casinos do not attract the same kind of customer as the 50-cent lottery.

"The lottery doesn't give them the same kind of action they want," he said. "It would make no dent at all in the Nevada operation. Lobbyists that come over from there are all wet."

The conclusion of the Assembly Committee on Governmental Organization:

"It appears that the initial mediocre performance of the New Hampshire and New York lotteries is due to a lack of market experience rather than an inherent defect in lotteries as sources of substantial public revenue at a high (but acceptable) administrative cost.

"Strict regulation of the lotteries in New Hampshire, New York, and New Jersey has shown that American lotteries can be operated without the corruption which permeated them in the 1800's.

"In addition, there has been no evidence to indicate that state lotteries have led to increases in street crime or would be of interested to organized crime syndicates."

Now a Major Puppeteer

As a little girl growing up in San Mateo, Nikki Tilroe studied dancing and for a hobby made little mice figurines out of pipe cleaners and tissue. She was one of the major puppeteers appearing yesterday at 8 p.m. in the concert hall of Mills College, Oakland as the Canadian entry to the National Convention of Puppeteers of America, August 14 through 18.

Then she was Nikki Agee, the dancing daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Agee. Music being a part of their household she had been influenced by a Deems Taylor picture book, "Moments Mousical" that featured drawings of Egyptian mice.

It was her ambition after studying with Olga Ziceva in San Mateo, graduating from Hillsdales High School and a year in New York with the Robert Joffrey School, to become a professional dancer. But a knee injury prevented that, despite continued study with Hanya Holm.

Her dancing was limited to positioning the mice figurines into ballet poses from famous ballets. Mice and dancing became synonymous and after marriage to New York producer Bob Tilroe (who met her at a dance audition and asked her if she could do a Cockney accent — she did), they sold the idea to a Toronto televison station.

"We added a cat. Then we worked with rod puppets and it took five people to make Arabella dance."

Now they have a troupe of 14 with a new television format in the works that will be syndicated to the United States. They call their company Frog Print Theatre and dream of having a national puppet theatre school to train puppeteers in all phases or puppetry including dancing.

"A knowledge of movement, and mime is very important. Puppet theatre hasn't improved in 30 years. Most puppeteers don't approach it as an art form but as a craft. Making the puppets is where their interest lies."

"To us the most important thing is what you do with it after its created. In Czechoslovakia, they have a 100 member company. In Russia one compnay has 300 full time performers where they only take trained actors and dancers to learn the art."

The couple likes living in Toronto where there is a community of puppeteers. Nikki also appears daily on a children's television show disguised as a five foot squirrel.

"The large city markets for puppetry are closed and a lot of New York shows are produced up here. We are working on a new show now featuring all underwater puppets. They are hand puppets with mouth sinc and voice prerecorded."

Assisting the Tilroes at the colorful five day convention in Oakland are Pam Hodgins and Rose Alcantara, dancers from the Robert Kirkpatrick Dance Studio in San Mateo, eight puppets and an assistant Dorothy Gilmeister of Canada.

Wise Person Checks Furnace in Fall

By LORENE BEASLEY

A wise person has his furnace thoroughly checked in the fall as it can be mighty unpleasant to sit in a cold house while your SOS goes out to a busy heating firm. It is also sad to fall into the hands of an unethical or fraudulent heating firm.

The seasonal misrepresentations in the heating business have already begun. Complaints concerning the "furnace Gypster," the heating expert who offers to clean your furnace free and then uses scare tactics to get a major repair job, are daily being received by the Better Business Bureau. The Pacific Gas and Electric also has been receiving calls from concerned homeowners regarding men going house-to-house, representing themselves as working with PG&E offering to clean a furnace from $30 to $35. PG&E does not operate in this manner and does not do such work.

How does one know if a furnace inspector is legitimate? How can one be sure a furnace, outside of the fall checkup, does not need an expensive overhaul.

First, do not be taken in by the door-to-door solicitor who poses as a furnace company representative and is able to give a special price because he "just happened to be in the neighborhood doing work."

Another trick of such gypsters is to pose as a city furnace inspector. After using this guise to gain admission into the home, he may go as far as to actually condemn the heating system because "it is in dangerous condition." Families with small children, widows, the senior citizens and people with respiratory troubles are the special targets of such furnace crooks. The phoney city inspector's home call is followed up by a recommended good firm, actually an accomplice. The usual news is that the repair job will be an expensive job and possibly it would be cheaper and better in the long run to invest in a new furnace.

If you find your furnace not working properly, phone the PG&E. They will be happy to send a man out to check it. However, when their representative calls, make sure that he has his credentials to prove he is with PG&E. All PG&E representatives, and also the meter readers, are required to carry an ID card. Make them show it.

Under no circumstances allow your furnace to be removed before it has been given an impartial examination by PG&E. Get at least three estimates from firms known for reliability. Read and understand your contract before signing for any repairs or a new furnace. If installation calls for home alterations be sure a permit is obtained for all work and that the work has been satisfactorily completed before signing a completion certificate.

Hobbies for Leisure Time

In one of his best moments, George Bernard Shaw wrote, "The secret of being miserable is to have leisure to bother about." To help everyone use his leisure time, there are some wonderful books of unusual hobbies.

The first of these is Pamela McDowall's "Pressed Flower Collages and Other Ideas." Here is a book that gives the one, two, three steps of using flowers for such things as table mats and door finger plates. After reading it, one will know how to transform match boxes into attractive gifts, to decorate calendars and notebook covers, and how to make valentines and invitation cards from flowers.

One chapter tells how to design with pressed flowers. Another tells how to make cartoon collages, and another gives ideas of miscellaneous things to make such as butterflies and bookmarks. One section discusses how to incase flowers in plastic. No wonder Ms. McDowall's book has been called the lovely, lovely book.

Speaking of plastics, Jay and Lee Newman have published "Plastics for the Craftsman." In it the basic techniques of working with plastics are delineated. The are six chapters to keep the hobbiest happy. They discuss everything from filling rattan butterflies to making acrylic dishes — from creating a snowflake mobile to making a room divider. Replete with pictures and outlines of procedures, "Plastics for the Craftsman" is designed to use up any dull moment.

For the person with far out tastes there is Springer's "Collector's Book of Bells," which is a history of bells as well as an invitation to collect them. Here is a book full of lore and illustrations that has been called "truly a rare and exquisite compendium."

From the many illustrations in this book my fancy selects the "molenbecker mill-braker." It is a bell made out of glass with the replica of a mill on top. Other favorites are the figurine bells. One of these that is very rare is made like a barmaid with a money pounch hanging at her side and mugs of foaming ale in her hands. Another has William Tell and his son carved in ivory as the handle of a silver bell. Another is an ancient Greek bell with the legs of the figure as the clappers.

A beautiful book on paper craft comes from Japan with instructions and illustrations to guide the reader who fancies an interesting hobby. Anyone using this book can turn a mundane sheet of paper into a work of art.

And then there is "Patchcraft" by Elsie Svennas, who demonstrates how bits of cloth can be conserved to decorate every room in the house and nearly every type of clothing. A reviewer called it a "book so full of ideas that it must appeal to all people."

His Dream About Guns

Guns! Guns! Guns!

I often dream that I have my gun tidily tucked in my dresser drawer to protect me and my brood from menaces of various kinds. Mixing my dream with a little reality, I come to the following possibilites.

1. Burglar rattles door downstairs. I stumble out of bed, stub my toe, rummage around for my gun, and by the time I find it, the burglar and the family silver are gone.

2. Same scene as above, but I find the gun. Heart beating and hands trembling, I pull it out of the drawer and shoot myself in the leg.

3. Same scene as above. I find my gun, dash downstairs to where the noise occurred, see a menacing and shadowy figure and shoot. When the lights go on, I find my son bleeding to death on the good family rug.

4. Same as above. I come dashing down with my gun, suddenly to freeze in my tracks when I realize that the burglar also has a gun. He knows what to do with his.

5. Same as above. I confront the burglar and ask him to put the silverware down. He refuses, and in my excitement I actually pull the trigger. Something goes wrong at my trial (My Trial?), and I get to think about guns and the wisdom of keeping them for some months in a prison cell.

In May I wrote an article concerning firearms which included the statement that 20,000 Americans are killed each year by guns. This triggered (if you will forgive the term) a barrage of mail claiming that my figure concerning the number of deaths each year was wrong. Some of the letters were unusually strong.

I have since learned that such articles usually attract letters. I have also become aware that my personal experience was not uncommon and that those who oppose gun legislation in any form are among the great letter writers on the American continent.

Writing letters is a perfectly appropriate exercise of the right of free speech. It is also proper for those who believe in gun registration and control to comment on the vocal nature of the opposition.

For the dialogue concerning firearms appears to be out of balance. A large number of Americans favor stronger legislation (certainly as to registration), but these persons are largely silent. Those who speak out, or those whose views appear in the media are left to do the job alone. Because of silence on one side of the issue, the letter writers seem more numerous and stronger than they really are.

Finally, it may be that some of the people who oppose gun control do so because they really don't understand the size of the problem. The correspondence addressed to my earlier column heavily attacked the validity of the figure of 20,000 annual deaths from firearms. Verification and reverification showed it to be accurate and correct. The truth is that about 20,000 Americans die each year as the result of gunfire (including homicides, accidents and suicides) and that we could fill Candlestick Park (as expanded for football) every three years with the bodies of those so taken.

Perhaps, just perhaps, some of those opposed to improved legislation don't understand this stark fact.

20,000 persons (or thereabouts) are killed by guns in the United States each year.

We Don't Pass Gossip

ONE THING WE DON'T do is pass along gossip. That's a no-no in our book. So when we heard two veddy prominent San Mateo politicos were vying for the attention of an attractive civic worker we decided NOT to listen. If one of the gentlemen isn't busy enough chasing after an elected office who am I to say differently? After all, neither is shackled, yet. (P.S. If we ever did such a thing without first getting unshackled it would be suicide.)

GOOD NEWS — Bob Bernicchi, former head of the North San Mateo County Sanitation District, and now a consultant to same, has been named to head the newly formed Bay Area Sanitation Agency (BASA). Quite a plum. Both S.M. Supervisor Jim Fitzgerald and Daly City Mayor Bud Lycett are on the BASA board. And both were Bernicchi's old bosses. How about that?

CAN THIS BE TRUE? Perhaps, perhaps. In the class catalog at San Francisco State (ooops, we mean San Francisco University) a Frank L. Greenwood is listed as a lecturer, with salary of course. Wonder if it's THE Frank Greenwood, superintendent at Jefferson Elementary School District? The money ain't bad for this sort of work, we hear.

WE WANT ONE — Everyone else seems to be getting one, so we want one too! The other day a couple guys showed me a card that Colma Police Chief Raymond Ottoboni Jr. had scribbled a brief note to anyone who may stop them to show "all due respect" to the bearer. On the other side is Ottoboni's printed name and title. And it's signed by the chief. Curious about such things, we called some local police chiefs and they practically laughed themselves to death.

As one chief explained: "A card like that and 25 cents will get you a ride on a cable car." By gosh, I didn't know they raised the fare on those cable cars.

STILL ON THE SUBJECT of Colma — At a meeting the other night concerning establishment of a police reserve force some spectators became critical of certain procedures enacted by the chief in recent months. The discussion spilled over onto the front steps of City Hall after the meeting and one of the critics buttonholed Councilman Raymond Ottoboni, Sr., father of the chief. Seeing this confrontation, the chief rushed in where Angels fear to tread and warned the critic to lay off his father.

Later, witnesses to the incident allege the chief began to take off his coat in an obvious menacing challenge to "the public" who were talking to the former mayor. This is how today's police remain calm, cool and collected when they don't even know what's really going on? We happen to know a lot of police in the Bay Area, and that's the first time we've ever seen such a childish display.

SICK CALL — Gale Dreisbach in Merritt Hospital, Oakland. Kidney ailment felled the South City city manager. . . .

GUESS WHICH COP was spotted pulling a woman rider on a horse over to the side of the road — in Colma? Ditto a bicycle rider.

BUT CHANGES ARE HAPPENING in Colma — An agenda for the meetings is in the making (hurrah); a budget may be forthcoming (another hurrah) a public address system was suggested by Councilman Earl Taylor (hurrah, sort of) and some semblance of order has descended on those elected officials.

WHEN THE PRESS singles out a politician for criticism it's called a "slanted article." When a newsman praises a politician he is condemned for "favoring" someone. What do you call it when politicians shower favors on a singular press? Is this in the public interest to get coverage from one newspaper? Of course not. But in the coastside city of Pacifica it is an old (and apparently accepted) habit for the politicians to play the local press to the hilt. So great is this favoritism that hardly anyone OUTSIDE of Pacifica knows what's going on IN the city.

It wasn't until last Saturday when one of our secret sources informed us that City Manager Jim Swayne was getting a testimonial at Nick's Restaurant (he being COUNCILMAN Nick Gust) that we had any idea Swayne was leaving. The enterprising city manager is going to Ukiah. Although most of you folks in Pacifica already know about this, we are writing here for those folks outside the city who perhaps knew, and thought well of, Jim Swayne.

County Delays San Bruno Mtn. Park Designation

Some clarification and map coloring is needed by the Board of Supervisors before it will officially include 1042 acres of San Bruno Mountain in the county master plan as park and open space.

County Planning Director Donald Woolfe was requested by the supervisors to have the necessary information before the board August 15 at 2:30 p.m. That was the time the board scheduled for its continued hearing on the proposal to designate the park and open space area south of Guadalupe Parkway near the "saddle" area, as well as 40 acres on the north side of the parkway surrounding the headwaters of Colma Creek, as a buffer zone for expected residential development.

Speakers who appeared at the hearing yesterday to amend the county general plan for inclusion of the San Bruno Mountain park and open space are expressed concern that a multi-colored map presented by the owner, Crocker Land Company, was confusing as to designation of space, and did not specify the 40-acre zone, which has been recommended by the County Planning Commission.

Several persons urged a delay to study ways and means of acquiring the entire mountain as open space preserve.

One speaker, Mike Kiser of Brisbane, contended that the park-open space area will be only 10 per cent usable.

The Sierra Club sent a message urging acquisition of the mountain in its entirety as the "last chance for preservation of open space in North San Mateo County."

Woolfe envisions the park, he said, as a "passive" area, more county-wide in concept than a small "active" park.

He also contended that the text of the county's general plan is more meaningful than a colored map as to the specific delineation of the park and open space area.

Supervisor James V. Fitzgerald said a specific delineation is necessary to promote the charter amendment proposal on the November 7 general election ballot to add 10 cents to the county tax rate for acquisition and development of parks and open space land. It is anticipated the county is going to have to purchase about 520 acres of the San Bruno Mountain site for park use, with the remainder being donated by Crocker for open space.

After listening most of the afternoon, the board decided that it would concur in the recommendation of the county manager for a "more careful delineation" of what is proposed by the planning commission for inclusion in the park and open space recommendation.

S.S.F. Lawyers Ask Damages for Noise

South San Francisco councilmen last week routinely denied and referred two unusual claims against the city to insurance attorneys.

One, for $125, was from attorneys John Sherman and Al Haverty, 405 Grand Avenue. Sherman is part-time city attorney for Pacifica, assisted in that position by Haverty, who also is president of the North County Bar Association. Sherman signed the complaint.

The attorneys claim a loss of working hours due to loud noise of street improvement work being done on Maple Avenue during the day.

Maple Avenue intersects with Grand Avenue. The claimants said the noise necessitated closing their office at 2:30 p.m. on July 23.

The other claim was from Paul and Myrtice Wong, of 2266 Derry Way. They are asking $47.70 to replace a window and $125 for drapes torn by falling glass from the window.

According to their claim, a dining room window was broken by a rubber baseball July 7, with the scattering glass tearing the drapes.

"We feel this was due to inadequate fencing and poor recreational supervision at the Fox Ridge Elementary School," said the claim in part. It also noted that there have been eight to 10 baseballs in their back yard in a matter of 11 months.

CONTROVERSIAL PALMS — These palms at 810 B Street in San Mateo, reportedly more than 50 years old, will be cut down or retained — depending upon the outcome of a fight between the property owner and the Downtown Beautification Committee. The construction work in the foreground is part of the B Street widening project.

The Great Palm Tree Debate

By ALAN QUALE

There are two sides to every story — and in this case two stories for every tree, specifically, two Phoenix Canary palms located near the corner of Ninth Avenue and B Street in San Mateo.

Realtor Phil Sofos, owner of the property on which the trees stand, wants to cut them down.

Sofos claims the palms are inhabited by lice, bats and rats. Beautification Committee members claim the palms are the natural nesting habitat for the Hooded Oriole.

Committee members say the palms provide shade between the homes and the street, enhancing the value of Sofos' property. The realtor counters that the trees are a fire hazard to the homes and insists that if they were an asset he wouldn't remove them.

The committee says with the completion of the B Street widening project the palms will be located at the sidewalk's edge, enhancing the project. Sofos says the palms are almost dead because of deterioration and continuously shed debris, littering the walk.

Sofos adds that he wants to remove the palms and replace them with Chinese Elm, which he claims will grow as tall as the present palms in three years.

Committee members say the realtor thinks trees have "no business" in the downtown commercial-zoned area.

The debate could go on . . . and on.

But San Mateo City Ordinance 1960-1835 will most likely end the dispute. The ordinance states that "heritage trees" such as trees larger than 18 inches in diameter, native to California, or of historical significance, may not be cut down without a permit from the City Park Department.

The Park Department makes its decision on such matters upon recommendations from the Beautification Committee.

That could end this "two-sided" tree story.

Burlingame Swindle Foiled

An alert bank teller and some fast police work foiled a $10,000 "pigeon drop" attempt on an 83-year-old woman in Burlingame last week. Three persons were arrested and booked at county jail.

The victim told officers she had stopped to rest on a bench on Cortez Avenue when she was accosted by a young woman who showed her money in an envelope, called her "Gram" and talked too fast for her to understand.

A second young woman joined them and the next she knew she was being walked to the Wells Fargo Bank on Primrose Road, she said.

The two women did the talking at the bank, also, asking the teller for $10,000 cash from the elderly woman's account for home remodeling and a vacation, police learned.

They refused a cashier's check, however, and the suspicious teller called on Manager Andy Kerr when one woman said, "We want cash, don't we, Gram?" and nudged the woman.

The women refused Kerr's offer of a cashier's check and asked for a cab to be called. Kerr also had police notified.

Kerr got the $10,000 cash from the bank vault and asked the elderly woman to come to his desk alone for it, which she did, with the two other women then leaving the bank.

In the meantime, however, police had arrived from the station a few blocks away and set up surveillance.

The subjects were arrested shortly after. At 2:40 p.m. they picked up Katherine Nichol Sonntag, 22, as she walked on Chapin Avenue.

Forty minutes later officers stopped a car at Fairfield Road and Palm Drive and arrested Kathleen Jewel Dennis, 20, a waitress, and Larry Darnell Clay, 35, driver of the car.

All were booked on suspicion of conspiracy, grand theft and attempting to commit a crime. Clay also was booked on traffic warrants. All three reside in San Francisco.

Mrs. Dennis was released on $7500 bail and is to appear for arraignment at 10 a.m. August 22 in Central District Municipal Court.

101st Convention Coming to San Mateo

The 101st Airborne Division Association, meeting in national convention in Orlando, Florida, last week, voted to come to San Mateo for its 1974 national convention.

The news was relayed to San Mateo Mayor Jack Murray by Linda Giese, the girl whose dedication to her brother led to the adoption of Company A of the 101st as "San Mateo's Own."

Linda was in Orlando at the invitation of the division, and has been part of the San Mateo delegation which sought the convention.

Jerry Greenbach, operator of the Villa Hotel, and representatives of the county Convention and Tourist Bureau, as well as Buckingham Little, president of the Northern California Chapter of the Association, also worked for San Mateo in Orlando.

Linda was seated at the head table of the national body prior to the vote, as the honored guest of the convention.

Gen. Maxwell Taylor, the speaker, was high in praise of San Mateo in his remarks and presumed that the vote "would be favorable."

Los Angeles, which had been promised the convention, graciously withdrew in favor of San Mateo. Had it not, it would have been four more years before the 101st could come here.

"Everybody knew about the adoption. Magazines telling about San Mateo were everywhere. Everyone wanted to come. Their only question was, 'Where is it' " she said.

Convention speakers were very impressed with the fact that the San Mateo City Council had established a memorial room in the San Mateo City library for memorabilia of the 101st.

A New Scout Handbook Due

The over 6½ million youth and adult members of the Boy Scouts of American soon will have a new handbook, used by all Scouts as a manual for advancement and reference, according to Albert J. Horn, president of the San Mateo County Council.

Since its first edition back in 1911, the Scout Handbook has sold over 16 million copies, which guarantees it a place in publishing history alongside the Bible and other best sellers. Over 50 million Americans have been enrolled in Scouting since 1910. Among the better known former owners of the Scout Handbook were President John F. Kennedy, Astronaut Neil Armstrong, Walter Cronkite, Frank Blair, Ozzie Nelson, Jack Anderson, and Dr. Ralph Bunche.

The new edition reprints none of the material in the old handbook. It's a complete overhaul, designed to introduce the changes in Scouting that go into effect on September 1.

For the past four years, individuals and national committees have been planning changes to make Scouting more responsive to the needs of today's youth. Surveys and field studies told the BSA what was needed and the new program was built around survey input from boys themselves. They'll get more leadership training, greater voice in planning and decision making, alternate routes to higher rank, team sports, and relaxed uniform options.

WORDLY WILBURN, the Daly City Recreation Department's leaping wonder gets sets for the second Daly City Frog Jumping Contest and a day of festivities in "The World of Games" playground day at Westlake Park on August 24.

'World of Games' Set for Daly City

A day of free contests, games and activities will be offered as the Daly City Recreation Department's end-of-summer playground event, "The World of Games," at Westlake Park on August 24, from 10:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

The day's activities will begin at 10:30 a.m. with an "Olympic Style" parade with youngsters from the playgrounds dressed in colorful team outfits.

Contests and games from 11 a.m. - 12:30 p.m. will include equestrian event, four-man egg walk, greased rope pull, world championship broom hockety, sack races, softball games, log rolling, one-on-one basketball, chess, Carroms and checkers.

Midday activities will include an All-American Bar-B-Que lunch at a cost of only 50 cents for each youngster.

Activities from 1:30 - 3 p.m. will feature each playground, presenting carnival-type games of fun and skill on the Midway Special. Attractions will include "The Second Annual Frog Jumping Contest" with each playground entering a leaper, and a big watermelon eating contest.

Bus transportation will be provided for youngsters from playgrounds away from the Westlake area. For those riding buses a charge of 75 cents will pay for lunch, transportation and insurance.

Youngsters should contact their playground director to enter various contests and games for information on how to get in on the day's festivities.

Ortega School Dancing Slated

J-Teens will be dancing at Ortega School in Pacifica on August 18 from 7-9:30 p.m. to "Cuevas", a local family from Pacifica. Meanwhile, the teens will be dancing at Terra Nova on Saturday night, August 19, from 8-11 p.m.; "Flying Circus" from Sausalito will play for the teens.

Jaycees Man Fair Booth

The San Mateo County Jaycees had a booth in the Community Building, staffed each evening by the respective Jaycee Chapters in the County, daytime staffing of the booth was done by the League of Women Voters and the presi- dent state director of the San Bruno Jaycees, Phil Obershaw and John Cadigan.

The Jaycees were at the fai to inform the public of the many projects put on by the Jaycees in the community, also to Register Voters and publicize the walk for Mankind on Octomer 21, sponsored by the Belmont, San Carlos, Redwood the "Project Concern."

A 'Carnival Brazil' Set In Pacifica

During the week of August 21-25 the Pacifica Recreation Department will end its summer program with a 'Carnival Brazil."

This is a chance for the entire family to join other Pacificans to dedicate themselves to forgetting reality and ignoring tomorrow.

At the carnivals located throughout the City, commonly called "blocos" or block parties in Brazil, there will be gay and colorful parades of dancing children in costumes as well as penny carnivals with games, food, fun and prizes for everyone.

Carnivals will be held at these locations:

August 23 — Ortega, 6:30-9:30 p.m.; Fairmont Shopping Center, 6:30-9:30 p.m.

August 24 — Pacific Manor Shopping Center, 12-4 p.m.; Linda Mar Shopping Center, 1-5 p.m.; Vallemar Schol, 7-10 p.m.; Westview School, 7-10 p.m.

Searsville Lake Trip For Daly City

The Daly City Recreation Department is sponsoring its final trip for the 1972 Summer Program with a trip to Searsville Lake for children seven years of age or older.

Local playgrounds will be going on the trip August 16 and 17. Prices for the trip are $1.50 (7-12 years of age) and $1.75 (13 and older) which covers transportation and accident insurance fee.
